Its International, as well as Imperial, status is therefore unique, and its circulation is as wide-ranging as the territories it covers.

In brief, its aim is to record, and comment on, the activities—political, cultural, and economic—of the peoples of the NEAR AND MIDDLE EAST, INDIA AND THE FAR EAST, to supply them with a practical link with Great Britain as well as with one another, and to promote their material prosperity by the assistance given to industry and commerce.

The annual subscription comprises not only the regular weekly numbers but also the valuable Supplements issued during the course of the year. These deal authoritatively and comprehensively with the progress—economic, social, and political—of the particular country dealt with, covering the industries and oversea trade, so that their contents form a handy work of reference.

As owing to the war the Society has lost temporarily the subscriptions of its continental members and the sale of its publications to continental booksellers, it is the earnest hope of the Council that members in the British Empire, the United States, and elsewhere will assist towards the maintenance of this Journal by the recruitment of new members, the prompt payment of annual subscriptions and if possible by donations.

By a resolution passed at the Anniversary Meeting on 8th May, 1941, all Members who pay the full subscription of £3 3s. whether living in Great Britain or abroad will be styled "Fellows of the Royal Asiatic Society".
