

NEWS AND NOTES

PERSONAL AND MISCELLANEOUS

Compiled by the Managing Editor

Professor Pendleton Herring, of Harvard University, has succeeded Professor Francis W. Coker, of Yale University, as representative of the American Political Science Association in the Social Science Research Council. The Association's other two representatives are Professors Charles E. Merriam, of the University of Chicago, and Charles S. Hyneman, personnel recruiting specialist, United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Dr. John D. Millett is on terminal leave as a colonel in the Army of the United States and has returned to Columbia University as associate professor of public administration.

Mr. Rexford G. Tugwell, governor of Puerto Rico, has been appointed professor of political science at the University of Chicago and director of the Institute of Planning. He will assume his duties on July 1.

Professor Walter H. C. Laves, administrative consultant on international affairs, U. S. Bureau of the Budget, served as adviser to the American delegation to the First United Nations Assembly in London, and since returning to Washington has been giving a course on international administration at the School of Advanced International Studies.

On March 18-22, Professor Edward S. Corwin, of Princeton University, delivered five lectures on "Total War and the Constitution" on the William W. Cook Foundation at the University of Michigan.

Professor Charles M. Kneier has returned to his post at the University of Illinois. He has been awarded the Legion of Merit by the War Department for his work as head of the public administration section of the School of Military Government at Charlottesville, Virginia, where he served with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

An address on "The British Commonwealth and Trusteeship" was given at the Royal Institute of International Affairs by Mr. H. Duncan Hall during a visit to London in connection with his work as director of the British official war history on the civilian side in North America. The address is being published in International Affairs.

Professor Harlow J. Heneman has resigned his position at the University of Michigan in order to accept an appointment with the Bureau of the Budget in Washington.

Professor Charles E. Martin, of the University of Washington, was director of the twenty-first session of the Institute of World Affairs at Riverside, California, December 16-19, 1945. Mr. Kline R. Swygard, of the University of Washington, also participated.

Miss Sarah G. Blanding, recently elected president of Vassar College, was, until she became director of the College of Home Economics at Cornell University in 1941, assistant, and later associate, professor of political science at the University of Kentucky.

After two years of service in the U. S. Signal Corps during the war, Dr. Frank H. Jonas, formerly assistant professor of government and citizenship at the University of New Mexico, has accepted an assistant professorship of political science at the Utah State Agricultural College.

Dr. Jack T. Johnson, who has been on military leave, has returned to his duties as assistant professor at the University of Iowa. During the past two years, he served as a Russian interpreter and translator for the U. S. Navy. One of his tours of duty was with a portion of the Red Fleet.

Professor Karl Loewenstein, on leave from Amherst College, is in Germany with the Legal Division of the U. S. Group of Control Council. A new book by him, entitled Political Reconstruction, has lately been published by the Macmillan Company.

Professor John W. Masland, Jr., of Stanford University, has joined the Commission on Political Matters at Tokyo, serving under General MacArthur as an advisory board. The commission, together with one on economics and one on natural resources, is expected to serve for a period of approximately nine months.

Major Charles K. Horwitz, now on military leave from the Department of Welfare in New York City, where he has served as regional director and administrator since 1934, was recently awarded a "certificate of commendation" by the Commanding General of the Second Service Command for his contribution to the war mission in helping to organize and administer Army Emergency Relief and Personal Affairs activities. Major Horwitz has been serving as executive officer of these activities in the Second Service Command, with headquarters at Governor's Island, New York.

Professor Benjamin F. Wright has resigned the chairmanship of the department of government at Harvard University in order to accept the chairmanship of the Standing Committee on General Education which has been created to put the Harvard Report, General Education in a Free Society, into effect. His successor as chairman of the department of government is Professor Merle Fainsod, formerly director for the Retail Trades and Services Division, OPA, and deputy director of the Civil Affairs Training Program at Harvard.

Colonel Charles Fairman returned to Stanford University for the spring quarter after serving in the Judge Advocate General's Division of the Army since May, 1942. Sent to Africa early in 1943 to be chief counsel of the Allied Military Government of occupied territory, he later moved into Italy and thence to Paris and Frankfurt. Here he was chief of the International Law Division of the office of the Theater Judge Advocate. In more recent months, he was associated with Mr. Justice Jackson in the compilation indictment of war criminals. Colonel Fairman has been granted the Legion of Merit for his services.

After more than three years of government service in Washington and abroad, Dr. Gabriel A. Almond has returned to his teaching position at Brooklyn College, and has been granted a "demobilization award" by the Social Science Research Council to continue studies of German political development which he began as head of the Foreign Information Section, Domestic Branch, OWI, and as Deputy Chief, Documentary Research and Analysis, Morale Division, United States Strategic Bombing Survey.

After three years of service in the Army and six months' service as instructor in the Army University Center in Florence, Dr. Hugh E. Kelso, formerly of the department of history and government of Dennison University, has accepted an assistant professorship of government in the School of Business Administration at the University of Miami in Coral Gables, Florida.

Dr. Donald C. Stone, of the U. S. Bureau of the Budget, served as a member of the American delegation in the conference on UNESCO in London, as United States representative on the Administrative and Budgetary Committee of the Preparatory Commission of the United Nations, as advisor to the United States delegation at the first session of the General Assembly of the United Nations, and as United States representative on the Preparatory Commission of UNESCO.

Dr. Joseph R. Starr, associate professor at the University of Minnesota, has resigned his position on the staff of the University. He received an honorable discharge from the U. S. Army at Marburg, Germany, on October 27, 1945, after serving for over two years in North Africa, France, and Germany, and has accepted a position as an historical officer with the Historical Division, Headquarters U. S. Forces, European Theater, with headquarters at Hochst near Frankfurt.

Dr. Paul K. Walp, formerly of the University of Tennessee and later secretary of the board of civil service examiners, U. S. Engineers Office, War Department, Manhattan District, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, has been appointed placement adviser for the maintenance division of the Civilian Personnel Office in the San Bernardino Air Technical Service Command. He is the holder of a War Department award for "work essential to the production of the atomic bomb."

Dr. Joseph M. Ray, formerly of the University of Alabama, has been made head of the department of government and politics at the University of Maryland.

During January, Professor Walter R. Sharp, of the College of the City of New York, served as associate secretary of the United Nations Site Committee, assisting in the investigations leading to the eventual selection of a location for the permanent headquarters of the United Nations Organization.

During the first term of the 1946 summer session, the University of Wyoming is holding an Institute of Pacific and Far-Eastern Affairs. The Institute will be devoted to the politics and problems of the Far East, with emphasis on an American policy in that region. Dr. Feliks Gross, lecturer at New York University, is director.

After teaching at Columbia University four years and serving as assistant to the dean of Columbia College, Dr. Richard C. Snyder has accepted an assistant professorship at Princeton University.

Dr. Karl A. Bosworth has been appointed assistant professor of political science at Western Reserve University. After receiving his doctor's degree at the University of Chicago, Dr. Bosworth was connected with the Institute of Public Administration at the University of Alabama, the Illinois Legislative Reference Council, and most recently the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada.

Mr. Lorrace Catterson, formerly of the University of Missouri and later of the Arkansas Polytechnical College, and recently returned from air service in Italy, has accepted an instructorship at Florida State College for Women.

Following his return from India, where he served as special representative of the Foreign Economic Administration and special agent of the U. S. Commercial Company, Dr. Eric Beecroft, formerly of the University of California, has been appointed special assistant to the Secretary of the Interior.

The Canadian Institute of International Affairs has started publication of a new quarterly, International Journal, edited by C. Cecil Lingard and devoted exclusively to international relations. Subscriptions, at three dollars a year, may be sent to the Institute, 230 Bloor St. West, Toronto, Canada.

Dr. Lee S. Greene, of the University of Tennessee, has been elected chairman of the Knoxville civil service board.

After three years with the Department of Justice and the Office of Strategic Services, Dr. Alexander N. Dragnich has accepted an assistant professorship at Western Reserve University.

Mr. Francis W. Russell, chief of the Division of Public Liaison in the Department of State, invites correspondence from teachers of political science regarding the work of this unit.

Dr. Marian D. Irish, of Florida State College for Women, has been appointed consultant to the recently organized Florida tax commission.

After three years of service as lieutenant commander in the Navy, most of the time in combat intelligence work at Pearl Harbor, Dr. Hollis W. Barber has returned to Tulane University, where he has been promoted to the rank of associate professor.

Professors David Fellman, of the University of Nebraska, William M. Gibson, of Duke University, and Spencer D. Albright, who has taught at Reed College and the University of Washington, will give courses at the University of Wisconsin during the coming summer session.

With the return of Associate Professor E. F. Spellacy from the Navy, the University of Washington has completed its postwar staff in political science.

Seattle and the University of Washington will be hosts at the May meeting of the Maritime Division of the I. L. O. The University bureau of international relations has been designated liaison agency for student relations with the meeting.

At the University of Tennessee, Mr. Fred J. Khouri and Mr. Robert G. Crawford have been named instructors in political science.

Mr. Clinton L. Rossiter, recently released from naval service, has been appointed instructor at the University of Michigan.

Dr. Arthur D. Angel, instructor in political science at Pomona Junior College, was, in January, appointed assistant professor of social science at Drake University.

Dr. Harold W. Davey, formerly of the Illinois Institute of Technology, has become director of the Institute on Postwar Reconstruction at New York University.

Dr. Andrew Gyorgy, author of a recent work on geopolitics, has been appointed to an assistant professorship at the University of New Hampshire.

Professor Charles F. Spencer has recently returned from service in the Navy to his teaching position in East Central State College, Ada, Oklahoma.

After three years of service as captain, major, and lieutenant colonel in the Army, Professor James Q. Dealey, Jr., has returned to Hamilton College. During most of his service he was with the G-5 section of the 1st U. S. Army staff, and during the German phase of the invasion he had charge of the civil administration sub-section of that section. After the surrender, he left Germany and went to Paris in connection with the planning of the organization of the two army universities in France and Great Britain.

Dr. George H. Watson, recently discharged from Civilian Public Service, has been appointed associate professor and acting chairman of the political science department at Roosevelt College, Chicago. Before entering Civilian Public Service a year ago, he served for two years as executive director of the Federation of Tax Administrators.

Dr. Hans Aufrecht, formerly of New York University and Hunter College, has been appointed assistant on international organization affairs in the Division of International Organization Affairs of the Department of State.

Major Valentine Jobst III, who was in the Army Air Force from April, 1942, and stationed chiefly at Selfridge Field, Michigan, and Orlando, Florida, has returned to academic work at the University of Illinois.

After two years of service in the Civil Affairs Division in England, France, Germany, and Austria, Lieutenant Colonel Leon H. Durst has been appointed chief of the Field Service Public Relations Division in Branch Office 9 of the Veterans Administration, covering the states of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and part of Texas.

After service in England with the Office of War Information and later with the Office of Strategic Services, Dr. Irwin M. Tobin, assistant professor at Rhode Island State College, has been appointed a specialist on the British Commonwealth of Nations in the new Division of International Labor, Health, and Social Affairs in the U. S. Department of State.

Professor Charles H. McLaughlin, of the University of Minnesota, has received a demobilization award from the Social Science Research Council. He is located at Columbia University for the completion of his work for the doctorate, and expects to return to Minnesota for the fall quarter, 1946.

Professors Harold S. Quigley and A. N. Christensen, of the University of Minnesota, will teach during the coming summer at the University of Wyoming and the Colorado State College of Education at Greeley, respectively.

Professor Jasper B. Shannon has returned to his position at the University of Kentucky after an absence of three and a half years, during which time he served successively as visiting professor at the University of Wisconsin, head of the division of legislative analysis in the Department of Agriculture in Washington, acting director of the Graduate School in the Department of Agriculture, and instructor in the U. S. Army Training Center at Florence, Italy.

The professional graduate course in public administration in the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University, has been made a twelve-month program. A course program starts July 1, 1946, and another January 1, 1947, to accommodate the veteran demand.

The Macmillan Company announces that it has entered into an arrangement with ex-Secretary Cordell Hull for the publication of his memoirs. Colonel Andrew H. Berding is assisting Mr. Hull in the preparation of the book, which should be ready for the press sometime in 1947.

At the University of Pennsylvania, Professor James C. Charlesworth has returned from Army duty, and Major John R. Probert and Lieut. Commander Charles H. Harry, recently released from the services, have been appointed instructors.

At the University of Texas, Professor Emmette S. Redford returned in November after four years of service with the OPA, during the last year as assistant deputy administrator for rationing in the Washington office; and the following returned in March: Professor O. Douglas Weeks, who served as chairman of the political science branch of the Shrivensham American University and later in the political science branch at Biarritz; Professor Delevan Evans, who had been teaching history and government at the U. S. Military Academy; and Professor Edward G. Lewis, who had served with Naval Military Government.

Dr. Raymond L. Buell, foreign affairs adviser to Time and Life, died in Montreal on February 20, at the age of forty-nine. In earlier years,

Dr. Buell taught in a number of universities, and among posts later held were those of research director and subsequently president of the Foreign Policy Association, director of the Geneva Research Center, and chairman of the Public Affairs Committee. His books included: Contemporary French Politics (1920); The Washington Conference (1922); International Relations (1925); Democratic Governments in Europe (1935); and Poland: Key to Europe (1939). In 1940, he was a research worker in the Willkie campaign, and two years later he unsuccessfully sought a Republican nomination for Congress in the Massachusetts district in which he made his home.

At Indiana University, Professor Ford P. Hall, head of the department of government, has been named dean of a newly established Division of Adult Education and State Services. Professor Hall will assume the new position July 1, and will continue to act as head of the department of government for an indefinite period. Professor Pressly S. Sikes has recently been appointed dean of the Junior Division of the University and will give full time to his new duties, although for the time being retaining the directorship of the Institute of Government Research.

At the annual meeting of the American Council of Learned Societies held at Rye, New York, on January 24-25, officers of the Council for 1946 were elected as follows: chairman, Fred N. Robinson, American Academy of Arts and Sciences; vice-chairman, Frederic A. Ogg, American Political Science Association; secretary-treasurer, S. Whittemore Boggs, Association of American Geographers; members of the executive committee, A. R. Bellinger, American Numismatic Society, John M. Cooper, American Anthropological Association, Sturgis E. Leavitt, Modern Language Association of America, and Glenn R. Morrow, American Philological Association. Professors Joseph P. Chamberlain, of Columbia University, and Frederic A. Ogg, of the University of Wisconsin, delegates of the American Political Science Association, attended the meeting, and Professor Kenneth Colegrove, of Northwestern University, attended the conference of secretaries regularly held in conjunction with it. The ACLS now embraces twenty-four major learned societies in the fields of the humanities and social sciences and has an annual budget for aid to research and publication, for special projects, and for administrative expenses, amounting to approximately $300,000.

Following a year's study by a special committee, the University of Michigan has established an Institute of Public Administration, designed to provide instruction and counseling for graduate and undergraduate students in public administration, conduct research, offer services to public administrative offices and legislative bodies, and provide in-service training for advanced students through coöperation with offices of various units of government. The Institute will be under the direction of an executive committee with Dean E. Blythe Stason, of the Law School, as acting chairman and Professor John A. Perkins, of the political science department, as secretary.

At Fordham University, an organization known as the Burke Society has been formed to promote the study of political society. Dr. Ross J. S. Hoffman is chairman, and the charter membership consists of the members of the two departments of history and political philosophy and the social sciences. Four discussion meetings are being held during the current academic year on the general subject of democracy: the Soviet use of the term, promotion through American foreign policy, the rôle of public opinion in a democracy, and the possibility of "socialist" democracy remaining democratic. All of the discussions are to be published, and papers delivered at an initial meeting, comprising a symposium on De Tocqueville's Democracy in America, have already been issued as "Fordham University Studies, Burke Society Series, No. 1."

Forty-first Annual Meeting of the American Political Science Association. The forty-first annual meeting of the American Political Science Association was held at Philadelphia March 28-30, 1946, with the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel as headquarters. This was the first normal annual meeting of the Association since the American entrance into World War II. Although held in 1946, it was considered the 1945 annual meeting. Due to congested hotel accommodations, the Association did not hold a joint meeting with allied societies, although the Southern Political Science Association was invited to have its presidential address delivered on the same evening as that of the American Political Science Association. On this occasion, President John M. Gaus delivered an address on "Job Analysis of Political Science," and President H. C. Nixon, of the Southern Political Science Association, spoke on the subject of "Politics of the Hills." Several of the round tables were offered in coöperation with the American Society for Public Administration, which had met in the same place on the preceding two days. A round table on "Education for World Citizenship" was held in collaboration with the National Council for the Social Studies. There were also breakfast meetings of the Council of the Southern Political Science Association and the Managerial Committee of the Mid-West Conference of Political Scientists.

The termination of the war and the removal of the Office of Defense Transportation's restrictions on conventions occurred so late in 1945 that it was not considered practicable to plan a meeting for the Christmas recess in that year. A poll of the Executive Council of the Association