RoadFrames

The American Highway Narrative

KRIS LACKEY

“Without a doubt Kris Lackey’s RoadFrames is the finest interpretive analysis of U.S. highway literature ever written. . . . Lackey offers compelling insights about our national obsession for movement.”—Douglas Brinkley, author of The Majic Bus: An American Odyssey

LITERATURE AND ITS WRITERS

An Introduction to Fiction, Poetry, and Drama

Ann Charters, University of Connecticut
Samuel Charters

1997/cloth/2151 pages/$32.50 net
Instructor's Manual

■ the first introduction to literature truly to give writers their say, this groundbreaking new anthology is built on the premise that those who write literature offer the most useful perspectives on it ■ includes 160 commentaries, many by the same authors whose stories, poems, and plays appear in the book ■ the most comprehensive selection of fiction in any introduction to literature, chosen by the editor of the best-selling introductory fiction text ■ 77 alphabetically arranged stories and 55 commentaries ■ a gathering of 317 poems and 61 commentaries uniquely emphasizes poets as well as poetic analysis ■ judicious selection of 19 plays and 44 commentaries chosen for student appeal and instructional flexibility ■ 9 writers covered in depth through multiple works and Casebooks of commentaries — more than in any other text ■ innovative apparatus maintains the focus on the writers ■ abundant but unobtrusive instruction in critical thinking, reading, and writing about literature ■ new supplemental guide to writing research papers ■ comprehensive Instructor's Manual ■ CD-ROM on the poetry of Robert Frost available upon adoption

“The content is comprehensive and the examples are well-chosen. I particularly like the sense of history and the use of details that personalize literature and its writers. . . . The text ‘talks to’ students as it provides the means for them to become better readers, writers, and thinkers.”

— Iris Rose Hart, Santa Fe Community College

“I am greatly impressed by the wide variety of the selections and the pluralistic approach to cultures and forms. . . . I am also drawn to the inclusion of ‘commentaries’ and ‘casebooks’ that demonstrate how the literature is situated within different rhetorical communities.”

— Linda Bensel-Meyers, University of Tennessee — Knoxville
