
CONTRIBUTORS

Gustaf Arrhenius is a Senior Lecturer and Research Fellow at the Department of Philosophy, Stockholm University. He has written extensively on our moral obligations to future generations, applying the methods of social choice and game theory. He is currently working on population ethics, formal axiology, and democratic theory.

Ken Binmore is a mathematician turned economist interested in applying game theory in moral philosophy. He is currently visiting Caltech as Mellon Professor of the Humanities. His latest book is Natural Justice, forthcoming with Oxford University Press.

Campbell Brown is an Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Bowling Green State University. He works in moral philosophy.

Sir Partha Dasgupta is the Frank Ramsey Professor of Economics at the University of Cambridge and Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. His publications include An Inquiry into Well-Being and Destitution (1993) and Human Well-Being and the Natural Environment (2001). Professor Dasgupta is a Fellow of the British Academy, Fellow of the Royal Society, Member of the Pontifical Academy of Social Sciences, Foreign Honorary Member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and Foreign Associate of the US National Academy of Sciences.

Peter Dietsch obtained his Ph.D. in philosophy from the London School of Economics in 2004. After postdoctoral fellowships at the Chaire Hoover (Université catholique de Louvain) and at the Centre de recherche en éthique de l'Université de Montréal (CREUM), he is now Assistant Professor in Philosophy at the Université de Montréal.

Julian Le Grand is an economist at the London School of Economics who specialises in social policy. He is currently on secondment from the LSE to No. 10 Downing St where he is the Prime Minister's senior adviser on health policy. His latest book is Motivation, Agency and Public Policy: Of Knights and Knaves, Pawns and Queens, Oxford University Press 2003.

Wlodek Rabinowicz is Professor of Practical Philosophy at Lund University and Adjunct Professor in Social and Political Theory at the Research School of Social Sciences in Canberra. He is a member of the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences and of the Institut International de Philosophie. His current research interests include axiology and decision theory. He has also published in ethical theory, philosophical logic, game theory, and dynamics of belief.

Mathias Risse is an Assistant Professor of Public Policy and Philosophy at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University. He has published articles on topics in political philosophy, ethics, and decision theory, as well as on Nietzsche. Most of his recent work has focused on questions of global justice.

Steven Scalet is an Assistant Professor of Philosophy and Economics interested in issues of justice and ethics as they apply to market institutions. He currently teaches philosophy and economics at Binghamton University (SUNY). His latest article examines the value of prisoner dilemmas for sustaining healthy civil societies.

Nicholas Southwood is a Ph.D. student in the Philosophy Program in the Research School of Social Sciences at the Australian National University. He spent 2003/4 at Princeton University on a Fulbright Scholarship. His main research interests lie in moral and political philosophy. He has published articles in journals including The Southern Journal of Philosophy and Critical Review of International Social and Political Philosophy.

Viktor J. Vanberg, since 1995 Professor of Economic Policy, University of Freiburg, and since 2001 Director of the Walter Eucken Institut, Freiburg, Germany; from 1984 to 1995 Professor of Economics, George Mason University, Fairfax, USA. Selected publications: Rules and Choice in Economics (Routledge 1994); The Constitution of Markets (Routledge 2001).

Amos Witztum is a Senior Lecturer in Economics at London Metropolitan University. He is also a Senior Academic Advisor at the London School of Economics, the book review editor of Economica and a member of the international advisory board of The European Journal of the History of Economic Thought. He writes on the ethics-economics relationship from historical as well as analytical perspectives. He has recently published a textbook Economics: An Analytical Introduction (Oxford University Press, 2005).