

Business

213	Officers and Council	226	CFP Roster
219	15th Annual TLC	227	Next Issue
221	JPSE Editors' Report	228	Members of the Month
223	Call for Submissions	229	International
225	Technological Task Force	230	Organized Section Update
		255	Gazette
		259	Contributors

Meet the APSA Officers and Council

The following council members and officers were elected in 2017. APSA welcomes the new council members, returning council members, and other officers to their APSA leadership positions.

PRESIDENT

Kathleen Thelen

Kathleen Thelen is Ford Professor of Political Science at MIT. She received her BA from the University of Kansas and her PhD from the University of California, Berkeley.

Thelen is a comparativist whose work focuses on the origins and evolution of political-economic institutions in the rich democracies. Her latest book, Varieties of Liberalization and the New Politics of Social Solidarity (2014), received the Barrington Moore Prize and was co-winner of Best Book in the European Politics and Society Section. A previous work, How Institutions Evolve, was selected for the 2006 Mattei Dogan Award, and shared the 2005 Woodrow Wilson Foundation Award. Thelen has also contributed to the literature on institutional analysis, including Advances in Comparative Historical Analysis (2015) and Explaining Institutional Change (2010), both coedited with James Mahoney, Beyond Continuity (2005, with Wolfgang Streeck) and Structuring Politics (1992, with Sven Steinmo). Her article "Historical Institutionalism in Comparative Politics" remains the most cited and most downloaded contribution to the Annual Review of Political Science. Her work has also appeared in a number of journals, including World Politics, Comparative Political Studies, and Politics & Society, among others.

Thelen has been awarded fellowships from the Institute for Advanced Study (Berlin), Radcliffe Institute, Oxford University, the Max-Planck-Society, and the American-Scandinavian Foundation, among others. She is a Permanent External Scientific Member of the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies, and has held visiting appointments in Europe (Sweden, UK, France, Denmark) and Latin America (Mexico, Argentina). She was chair of the Council for European Studies (2002–2006) and president of the Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics (2008–2009). Along with Erik Wibbels, she edits the Cambridge University Press Series in Comparative Politics. She is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences (since 2015) and its German equivalent, the Berlin-Brandenburg Academy of Sciences (since 2009).

Thelen has been active in the association, most recently serving as President-Elect. In the past she served as a member of the APSA Council and as Treasurer. She has also served on numerous committees and as an officer in several Organized Sections—Comparative Politics (president), Politics and History (president), Qualitative and Multi-Method Research (vice-president), and European Politics and Society (treasurer).

PRESIDENT-ELECT

Rogers M. Smith

Rogers M. Smith is Christopher H. Browne Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of Pennsylvania. His BA is from James Madison College, Michigan State University, and his MA and PhD degrees are from Harvard University. Trained in the history of political thought and American constitutional law and politics, his scholarship blends empirical and normative concerns focused on the politics of citizenship and identity, especially issues of race, gender, and religion in American constitutional development. He is the author or coauthor of seven books, including Political Peoplehood (2015) and Civic Ideals (1997), which won the APSA's Bunche, Easton, and Greenstone awards. He has authored or coauthored over 90 articles in journals and edited volumes, including the American Political Science Review, Journal of Politics, Studies in American Political Development, and Political Theory. He received the Law and Courts Section's 2004 Wadsworth Award for his APSR article "The 'New Institutionalism' and the Future of Public Law." Smith has supervised 39 PhD theses and received Penn's Provost Award for Distinguished PhD Mentoring; Lindback Award for Distinguished Teaching; Dean's Award for Mentoring Undergraduate Research; and a Distinguished Undergraduate Teaching Prize from Yale, where he taught from 1980 to 2001.

At Penn he served as department chair from 2003 to 2006 and is now associate dean for social sciences. He founded the Penn Program on Democracy, Citizenship, and Constitutionalism in 2006 and has since directed it. He also cofounded the Teachers Institute of Philadelphia, a university-public school partnership. His APSA roles include chair of the Politics and History Organized Section, 2001–2002; program chair of Constitutional Law and Jurisprudence, 2001–2002; cochair of the Task Force on Graduate Education, 2002–2003; member of the Committee on the Status of Blacks in the Profession, 2004–2007; Council Member, 2005–2006; chair of the Perspectives on Politics editor search committee, 2008; Vice President, 2008–2009; member of the Task Force on Public Engagement, 2013–2014; and cochair of the Migration and Citizenship Section, 2013–2015. He received the Frank J. Goodnow Award in 2010. He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Academy of Political and Social Science, and the American Philosophical Society.

PAST-PRESIDENT

David A. Lake

David A. Lake is the Jerri-Ann and Gary E. Jacobs Professor of Social Sciences and Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of California, San Diego. His research focuses broadly on international relations. He is the author of The Statebuilder's Dilemma: Legitimacy, Loyalty, and the Limits of External Intervention (2016), Hierarchy in International Relations (2009), Entangling Relations: American Foreign Policy in Its Century (1999), and Power, Protection and Free Trade: International Sources of US Commercial Strategy, 1887–1939 (1988). He is also the coauthor of a comprehensive textbook, World Politics: Interests, Interactions, and Institutions (third edition, 2016) and coeditor of nine volumes on international political economy, international security, and international organizations. His research articles have appeared in the American Political Science Review, the American Journal of Political Science, the European Journal of International Relations, International Organization, International Security, World Politics, and others.

Lake received his PhD from Cornell University in 1984 and was on the faculty of the University of California, Los Angeles from 1983 to 1992. At UCSD, Lake has served as research director for international relations at the Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation (1992–1996 and 2000–2001), chair of the political science department (2000–2004), associate dean of social sciences (2006–2015), and director of the Yankelovich Center for Social Science Research (2013–present). In the profession, he has served as coeditor of the journal International Organization (1997–2001), cofounder of the Political Science Network within the Social Science Research Network (2007), founding chair of the International Political Economy Society (2005–2012), and president of the International Studies Association (2010–2011). The recipient of UCSD Chancellor's Associates Awards for Excellence in Graduate Education (2005) and Excellence in Research in Humanities and Social Sciences (2013), he was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 2006 and was a fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences in 2008–2009. He also received the Outstanding Mentor Award from the Society of Women in International Political Economy in 2012 and has helped train more than 60 PhD students at UCLA and UCSD.

Within the American Political Science Association, Lake was the founding chair of the Section on Political Economy (1990–1992), a member of the editorial search committee for Perspectives on Politics (2004), program cochair (2007), a member of the APSA Trust and Development Committee (2009–2011), a member of the Governing Council (2011–2013), chair of the Rules Committee (2012–2013), and chair of the ad hoc Committee on Governance Reform (2013–2016).

VICE PRESIDENTS

Evelyne Huber

Evelyne Huber is Morehead Alumni Professor of Political Science and chair of the department of political science at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She studied at the University of Zurich and received both her MA and PhD from Yale University. She studies democratization and redistribution in Latin America and advanced industrial democracies. She is the author of The Politics of Workers' Participation: The Peruvian Approach in Comparative Perspective (1980); Democratic Socialism in Jamaica (with John D. Stephens, 1986); Capitalist Development and Democracy (with Dietrich Rueschmeyer and John D. Stephens, 1992); Development and Crisis of the Welfare State (with John D. Stephens, 2001); and Democracy and the Left: Social Policy and Inequality in Latin America (with John D. Stephens, 2012). The last three books were co-winners of the Outstanding Book Award 1991–1992 from the ASA Political Sociology Section, winner of the Best Book Award 2001 from the APSA Political Economy Section, and winner of the Outstanding Book Awards 2013 from the ASA Sociology of Development Section and the Political Economy of the World System Organized Section. She has also contributed articles to, among others, World Politics, Latin American Research Review, Comparative Politics, Politics and Society, Comparative Political Studies, The Journal of Politics, American Journal of Sociology, American Sociological Review, and Economic Perspectives.

Evelyne was a member of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton University, a fellow at the Wilson Center, the Swedish Collegium for Advanced Study, the Kellogg Institute, the Hanse-Wissenschaftskolleg, and the Collegio Carlo Alberto, and she received an Honorary Doctorate in the Social Sciences from the University of Bern in 2010, a Guggenheim Fellowship in 2010, and the Distinguished Teaching Award for Post-Baccalaureate Instruction from the University of North Carolina in 2004. She is a former President (2012–2013) of the Latin American Studies Association and she served on the APSA Council from 2010 to 2012.

Pippa Norris

Pippa Norris is a comparative political scientist who has taught at Harvard University for a quarter century. She is Laureate Fellow and Professor of Government and International Relations at the University of Sydney, the Paul McGuire Lecturer in Comparative Politics at the John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University, and director of the Electoral Integrity project. Honors include Pennsylvania State University's 2016 Brown Medal for Democracy; the APSA 2016 Academic Leadership in Political Science; IPSA's 2014 Karl Deutsch award, the 2011 Johan Skytte prize in political science, with Ronald Inglehart; the ARC's 2011 Kathleen Fitzpatrick Australian Laureate Fellowship, a special recognition award by the UK Political Science Association; and Doctor honoris causa by the University of Edinburgh and Warwick University. Book awards include the 2006 Doris A. Graber award for the best book in political communications, A Virtuous Circle, and the Virginia Hodgkinson prize from the Independent Sector, Sacred and Secular.

Her research compares public opinion and elections, democratic institutions and cultures, gender politics, and political communications in many countries worldwide. She is founding director of electoralintegrityproject.com, established in 2012, and supported by the Australian Research Council and other funding agencies. Before Harvard, she taught at Edinburgh University and she studied at Warwick University and the LSE.

A well-known public speaker and author, she has published almost fifty books. In 2017, this includes Strengthening Electoral Integrity, Why American Elections are Flawed, and Election Watchdogs. Her current research focuses on a new book on populism. In professional service, she has been elected to executive councils for APSA, IPSA, the PSA-UK, and the World Values Survey Association. Within APSA, she has served on many committees and been president of research sections on Women and Politics Research, Political Communications, and Elections, Public Opinion, and Voting Behavior, as well as on the executive of the British Politics Group and the Representation and Elections Section. For details, see pippanorris.com or follow her on Twitter @PippaN15.

Gary M. Segura

Gary M. Segura is dean of the Luskin School of Public Affairs at University of California, Los Angeles. His work focuses on issues of political representation and social cleavages, the domestic politics of wartime public opinion, and the politics of America's growing Latino minority. Among his most recent publications are Latino America: How America's Most Dynamic Population is Poised to Transform the Politics of the Nation with Matt Barreto (2014) and two books with the Latino National Survey team. Earlier work has been published in the American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, and the Journal of Politics, among many others.

Over the last 18 years, he has directed polling research that has completed over 100,000 interviews of Americans of all backgrounds on matters of political importance. He has briefed legislators and senior administration officials and appeared on numerous news media outlets. Segura served as an expert witness on the nature of political power in all three landmark LGBT marriage rights cases in 2013 and 2015, Windsor v. United States, Hollingsworth v. Perry, and the historic Obergefell v. Hodges. Segura was one of the principal investigators of the 2012 and 2016 American National Election Studies, and was one of the principal investigators of the Latino

National Survey, in 2006. He is a past president of the Midwest Political Science Association and the Western Political Science Association, and a past council member of the APSA. He is also a past president of El Sector Latino de la Ciencia Política (Latino Caucus in Political Science). In 2010, he was elected a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

TREASURER

Thomas Pepinsky

Thomas Pepinsky is associate professor and director of undergraduate studies in the department of government at Cornell University. He specializes in comparative politics and international political economy, with a focus on emerging markets and Southeast Asia. He is the author of Economic Crises and the Breakdown of Authoritarian Regimes: Indonesia and Malaysia in Comparative Perspective (2009) and coauthor of Piety and Public Opinion: Understanding Indonesian Islam (forthcoming), as well as articles appearing or forthcoming in the American Journal of Political Science, British Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, Perspectives on Politics, Comparative Political Studies, World Development, World Politics, and other journals. His past work has been recognized with awards such as the Franklin L. Burdette/Pi Sigma Alpha Award for Best Paper presented at the 2009 APSA Annual Meeting. He received his PhD from Yale University in 2007.

Pepinsky has been active in APSA, serving as co-organizer of the Comparative Politics Organized Section for the 2017 Annual Meeting and organizer of the Political Economy Organized Section for the 2013 Annual Meeting. He also serves as a member of the steering committee for the Association for Analytical Learning on Islam and Muslim Societies (online at aalims.org), and is the founding president of the American Institute for Indonesian Studies and cofounder of the Southeast Asian Research Group (online at seareg.org). He regularly teaches courses in comparative politics, political economy, Southeast Asian politics, and research methods.

Pepinsky has been active in APSA, serving as co-organizer of the Comparative Politics Organized Section for the 2017 Annual Meeting and organizer of the Political Economy Organized Section for the 2013 Annual Meeting. He also serves as a member of the steering committee for the Association for Analytical Learning on Islam and Muslim Societies (online at aalims.org), and is the founding president of the American Institute for Indonesian Studies and cofounder of the Southeast Asian Research Group (online at seareg.org). He regularly teaches courses in comparative politics, political economy, Southeast Asian politics, and research methods.

COUNCIL

Joseph H. Carens

Joseph H. Carens is professor of political science at the University of Toronto and professorial fellow at the Institute for Social Justice at Australian Catholic University in Sydney. He holds a PhD and an MPhil in political science from Yale University as well as an MPhil in religious studies from Yale and an AB summa cum laude from the College of the Holy Cross. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada.

Carens is a normative political theorist who works on questions about immigration, multiculturalism, and economic justice. He has written four books, coedited two others, and published over 90 articles and book chapters. His most recent book The Ethics of Immigration (2013) won five book awards, including the David Easton award from the Foundations of Political Theory Organized Section of the APSA and the C. B. Macpherson award from the Canadian Political Science Association. An earlier book Culture, Citizenship, and Community: A Contextual Exploration of Justice as Evenhandedness (2000) also won the Macpherson award. He is currently working on a project titled "Taming the Market," the goal of which is to find ways to separate the organizational virtues of the market from its distributional and other defects.

Within the APSA, in addition to presenting papers at over 20 of the annual meetings, Carens has served as chair of the Franklin L. Burdette/Pi Sigma Alpha Award Committee, as cochair of the program committee for the Division on Migration and Citizenship, as a member of the David Easton Book Prize Committee, and as a member of the committee to choose a new editorial team for Perspectives on Politics in 2016.

Lisa García Bedolla

Lisa García Bedolla is Chancellor's Professor at the University of California, Berkeley. She received her PhD in political science from Yale University. García Bedolla studies why people choose to engage politically, and she has used a variety of social science methods—participant observation, in-depth interviewing, survey research, field experiments, and geographic information and she has used a variety of social science methods—participant observation, in-depth interviewing, survey research, field experiments, and geographic information system (GIS)—to shed light on this question. She uses the tools of social science to explore the causes of political inequalities in the United States, considering differences across the lines of ethnicity, gender, class, geography, sexuality, et cetera. García Bedolla believes an intersectional approach is critical to recognizing the complexity of contemporary US politics. She has consulted for campaigns, ballot initiatives, and national funders and has partnered with over a dozen community organizations working to mobilize low-income communities of color.

She is author or coauthor of three award-winning books and over 30 articles and book chapters exploring these questions, earning five national book awards and other awards. Her books include, with Melissa Michelson, Mobilizing Inclusion (2012), Latino Politics, second edition (2014), and Fluid Borders (2005). She is the only person ever to have won APSA's Ralph Bunche Award twice.

Over the course of her career, she has been very active within APSA, serving on the Nominating Committee, as cochair of the Committee on the Status of Latinas y Latinos in the Profession, as a member of two APSA Presidential Task Forces, as copresident of the Women and Politics Research Organized Section, as program chair for the Women and Politics and Race, Ethnicity, and Politics (REP) Organized Sections, on the executive committees of the REP and Public Policy sections, and on six award committees.

Lilly J. Goren

Lilly J. Goren is professor of political science and global studies at Carroll University in Waukesha, Wisconsin, where she received the 2011 Benjamin F. Richason, Jr. Faculty Award in teaching, research, and educational innovation. She holds an MA and PhD from Boston College.

Her areas of expertise include American politics, popular culture and politics, women's and gender studies, and politics and literature. She is coauthor, with Linda Beail, of Mad Men and Politics: Nostalgia and the Remaking of Modern America (2015). She is coauthor, with Justin Vaughn, of Women and the White House: Gender, Popular Culture, and Presidential Politics (2012), winner of both the Popular Culture Association/American Culture Association's 2014 Susan Koppelman Book Award, and the Southwest Popular Culture Association's 2014 Peter C. Rollins Book Award. Goren edited You've Come a Long Way, Baby: Women, Politics, and Popular Culture (2009). She is author of Not in My District: The Politics of Military Base Closures (2003), and coauthor of The Comparative Politics of Military Base Closures (2002). Goren has published articles in a variety of journals.

Goren has twice served as chair of the Politics, Literature, and Film Organized Section, where she is currently a member-at-large, and she is also serving a second term on the executive board of the Presidents and Executive Politics (PEP) Organized Section. Service to the APSA also includes membership on the Okin-Young Award Committee and on a variety of awards committees for the PEP and Politics, Literature, and Film Organized Sections. Goren was elected to a three-year term on the Governing Committee of the Association for Political Theory (APT), where she served as conference committee cochair for the annual meeting in 2015. She will be a Fulbright Fellow at the University of Bonn in the spring of 2018.

Simon Jackman

Simon Jackman is professor of political science and CEO of the United States Studies Centre, University of Sydney in Australia. He earned his doctorate from the University of Rochester in 1995. From 1996 to 2016 he taught at Stanford University's department of political science, with a courtesy appointment in statistics; prior to Stanford University, he held appointments at the University of Chicago and Australian National University. In 2013, Jackman was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He is a Fellow of the Society for Political Methodology and served as president (2003-2005). From 2009 to 2016 he was one of the principal investigators of the American National Election Studies. He is the author of Bayesian Analysis for the Social Sciences (2009) and many refereed articles on political behavior, political methodology, and political institutions.

Matthew Kocher

Matthew Kocher was a lecturer in the political science department and the Jackson

Institute at Yale University since 2007. He received his PhD from the University of Chicago in 2004. He joined the faculty of the political science department and the School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) at Johns Hopkins University as a senior lecturer in 2017. Kocher's research is concerned with the causes and internal dynamics of civil wars and other violent social processes. Within this field, he has been an innovator in the use of geographical information systems (GIS), quantitative micro-comparative analysis, and the construction of datasets from archival materials. His work has been published in the American Journal of Political Science, World Politics, Perspectives on Politics, Politics and Society, the Journal of Peace Research, Political Analysis, and Política y Gobierno. He has won the 2006 Gabriel A. Almond Award for the best dissertation in comparative politics, the APSA Comparative Politics Section's 2009 Gregory Luebert award for the best professional article in comparative politics, and the 2009 Article of the Year Award from the Journal of Peace Research. Kocher has previously taught at the Centro de Investigación y Docencia Económicas (CIDE) in Mexico City, the University of Notre Dame, and the University of Chicago.

Erin Richards

Erin Richards is senior I tenured faculty at Cascadia College in Bothell, Washington. Her academic interests include American institutions, state and local government, women in politics, citizenship, and pedagogy. She has published on community college teaching and worked on a multi-year multi-campus project examining learning and civic engagement in American government courses. She also helped create and implement curriculum for the BS in sustainable practices degree at Cascadia College.

Richards has served the discipline in many capacities including chairing the Ad Hoc Committee on the Status of Community Colleges in the Profession for APSA, the report of which led to creation of the Committee on the Status of Community Colleges in the Profession on which she serves. She also currently serves on the editorial board for the Journal of Political Science Education. Richards has also served as executive committee member, secretary, president-elect, president, and ex-officio for the Pacific Northwest Political Science Association, as well as on the Executive Committee for the Political Science Education Organized Section of APSA. Finally, Richards served on the Program Committee for APSA's Teaching and Learning Conference, where she helped create a community colleges track which led to increased community college faculty attendance at the conference.

Valeria Sinclair-Chapman

Valeria Sinclair-Chapman is associate professor of political science and College of Liberal Arts University Scholar at Purdue University. She is director of the Center for Research on Diversity and Inclusion and facilitator for the ADVANCE-Purdue Diversity Catalyst Program, an NSF-funded project to increase the numbers of women of color and women more generally in STEM fields at Purdue. Sinclair-Chapman is author, with Fredrick Harris and Brian D. Mc Kenzie, of Countervailing Forces in African-American Political Activism, 1973-1994 (2006), winner of the 2007 Ralph Bunche Book Award presented by the American Political Science Association and the 2007 W. E. B. DuBois Book Award presented by the National Conference of Black Political Scientists. She is author or coauthor of several book chapters, as well as articles in Legislative Studies Quarterly, Journal of Politics, Electoral Studies, Political Research Quarterly, PS: Political Science & Politics, and Politics, Groups, and Identities. Sinclair-Chapman is a former Ford Fellow, as well as a recipient of the Women's Research and Education (WREI) Congressional Fellowship. She has demonstrated a commitment to diversity and inclusion in higher education and has received multiple awards for contributions to student life.

Sinclair-Chapman is an active member of the American Political Science Association, the National Conference of Black Political Scientists, the Midwest Political Science Association, the Western Political Science Association, and the Southern Political Science Association. She is former copresident of APSA's Race, Ethnicity, and Politics Organized Section, a member of APSA's Committee on the Status of Blacks in the Profession, and past president of SPSA's Women's Caucus of the South. She has served on the council of the National Conference of Black Political Scientists and currently serves on the council of the Midwest Political Science Association. She has served on numerous award committees, including the Leon Weaver Award for APSA's Electoral Systems Section, MPSA's Lucius Barker Award, and as chair of NCOBPS's DuBois Book Award committee. In January 2016, Sinclair-Chapman was named colead editor of Politics, Groups, and Identities, a journal of the Western Political Science Association.

Laura Sjoberg

Laura Sjoberg is Colonel Allen R. and Margaret S. Crow Term Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Florida. She received her BA from the University of Chicago, her PhD from the University of Southern California, and her JD from Boston College. Her research centers around gender, sexuality, and security in global politics, with foci on feminist security theorizing and women's violence in global politics. She is the author or editor of twelve books, including, most recently, Women as Wartime Rapists (2016) and Interpretive Quantification (2017), with J. Samuel Barkin. Her work has been published in more than two dozen journals in political science, international relations, gender studies, law, and geography, including International Studies Quarterly, Feminist Review, and Political Geography. She currently serves as Homebase Editor of the International Feminist Journal of Politics and coeditor of International Studies Review. She teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in methodology, international security, international law, and gender in global politics.

Sjoberg served as program chair of the Sexuality and Politics Organized Section from 2012 to 2013 and section chair from 2013 to 2014. She served as the co-program chair of the Women and Politics Organized Section from 2013 to 2014, and secretary of the section from 2010 to 2012. She participates in the APSA mentoring program, and served on the Committee to Rename the International Relations Dissertation Award from 2015 to 2016. In addition to her work at APSA, she has been active in the International Studies Association (where she served as vice president from 2015 to 2016), the Southern Political Science Association, the International Studies Association-Northeast, and the International Studies Association-West. She has served on the editorial boards of International Studies Quarterly, International Studies Perspectives, Review of International Studies, Foreign Policy Analysis, Critical Studies on Terrorism, and the Journal of Global Security Studies.

Carol Weissert

Carol Weissert (nominated for a one-year term) is LeRoy Collins Eminent Scholar and Professor of Political Science at Florida State University. In 2016 she was Fulbright Distinguished Professor in American Political Science at Flinders University in Adelaide, Australia.

Her principal research interests are federalism and state politics with a special focus on health policy. She is the former editor of Publius: The Journal of Federalism. Her current research explores intergovernmental bargaining between federal and state governments, vertical diffusion of policies, policy implementation, and the impact of devolution.

She is coauthor of Governing Health: The Politics of Health Policy (now in its fourth edition); her research has appeared in journals including the Journal of Politics, Publius: The Journal of Federalism, Journal of Health Politics, Policy and Law, Legislative Studies Quarterly, Journal of Public Administration Research, and Theory, Health Affairs, Political Research Quarterly, and Administration and Society.

She is the recipient of the Daniel Elazar Award for Distinguished Scholarship in Federalism and Intergovernmental Relations from the Federalism Organized Section of APSA and the Donald Stone Award for Distinguished Scholarship in Intergovernmental Relations from the Organized Section on Intergovernmental Relations of the American Society of Public Administration. She is a fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration.

She has been president of the Southern Political Science Association and has chaired the Federalism Organized Section of APSA. In addition, she has held leadership positions in and chaired committees for State Politics and Policy, Public Policy, and Health Politics and Policy Organized Sections of APSA. She was chair of APSA's Organized Section Committee.

She has served on editorial boards of the American Political Science Review, State Politics and Policy Quarterly, Publius: The Journal of Federalism, and the Journal of Political Science Education. At FSU she is director of the LeRoy Collins Institute for Public Policy. Prior to coming to FSU, she was professor of political science and director of the Institute for Public Policy and Social Research at Michigan State University. Her PhD in political science is from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. ■

Continuing Council Members

Matt Barreto, University of California, Los Angeles

Mark Crescenzi, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Omar Encarnación, Bard College

Kristian Gleditsch, University of Essex

Juliet Hooker, Brown University

Amaney A. Jamal, Princeton University

Call for 2018 Nominees

The APSA Nominating Committee welcomes your suggestions for 2018 nominees for president-elect, vice president, and council member. Council members serve staggered three-year terms, and the president-elect and vice presidents serve one-year terms. The nominating committee encourages all members of APSA to suggest fellow members for consideration. Those wishing to do so should explain why they believe the person's accomplishments, background, and views would make them a good choice for a leadership position. Please send suggestions to nominations@apsanet.org by February 1, 2018. The committee will meet in February 2018 to begin compiling a slate of candidates. The completed slate of nominees will be announced in March, and will be put to a member vote via electronic ballot over the summer.

Find more information on APSA nominations online: apsanet.org/about/governance/elections. ■

Brett Ashley Leeds, Rice University

James Mahoney, Northwestern University

Byron D'Andra Orey, Jackson State University

Bo Rothstein, University of Gothenburg, Sweden

Colleen Shogan, Library of Congress

Cameron G. Thies, Arizona State University

Caroline Tolbert, University of Iowa

Renée Van Vechten, University of Redlands

Christina Wolbrecht, University of Notre Dame