Now in paper—

DISSEMINATION

Jacques Derrida

Translated by Barbara Johnson

In brilliant and original readings of Plato, Mallarmé, and Philippe Sollers, Derrida offers a major reevaluation of the logic of meaning and the function of writing in western discourse.

Through the concrete practice of “deconstruction,” he discovers and demonstrates a new reading of rhetoric and a new rhetoric of reading.

AFTER THE NEW CRITICISM

Frank Lentricchia

“... Professor Lentricchia’s exacting study could do much to stiffen the sinews and summon up the blood. For its mode is one of detailed, analytic exposition, and its effect that of unfolding by daylight a meticulous map of an area previously stumbled across in the dark. It liberates.”—

THE LIFE OF THE POET

Beginning and Ending Poetic Careers

Lawrence Lipking

Through careful readings of those crucial poems in which poets find their identities, Lipking attempts to define patterns of development that all poets share. He discusses poets ranging from Virgil to Robert Lowell, emphasizing “not the biographies of poets but the biography that gets into poems: the life that has passed through a refining poetic fire” (from the Preface).

JOURNAL OF THE FICTIVE LIFE

With a New Preface

Howard Nemerov

“These communings of a self-conscious, Jewish-American, college-tied intellectual (fictive, or non-fictive), opening a third dimension of dream, memory, and the acrostic preoccupations of the literary imagination, prove their own validity. . . . we are allowed close to the mystery of one man’s secret. A self-revelation—fiction or non-fiction—is achieved.”—Times Literary Supplement

Modern Drama and German Classicism

Renaissance from Lessing to Brecht

By BENJAMIN BENNETT. "Benjamin Bennett offers a profound and sensitive treatment of German classical drama and dramaturgy, of 19th-century German philosophy, and of modern drama and theater, particularly Ibsen, Shaw, Chekhov, Hauptmann, Pirandello, Cocteau, Brecht, and Ionesco."—Modern Drama. "This is a book any reader interested in drama is likely to go back to again and again. . . . Bennett challenges us by ideas. . . . With this book, at one stroke, he has put himself among the leading figures of German studies."—Comparative Literature. Winner of the 1980 James Russell Lowell Prize $19.50

The Shape of German Romanticism

By MARSHALL BROWN. "There can be no doubt that Brown has hit upon a fascinating subject and that he has pursued it with unusual energy, intelligence, and an admirable breadth of knowledge that includes numerous texts that have been unjustly ignored."—Seminar. "Brown writes with a flowing, jargon-free style, and the reader is rewarded with . . . a wealth of fruitful allusion and suggestive insight."—New German Studies. $17.50

The Poet's Madness

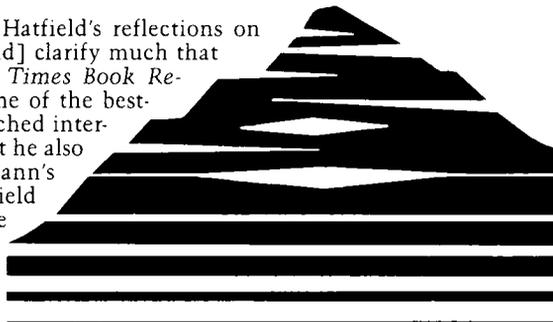

A Reading of Georg Trakl

By FRANCIS MICHAEL SHARP. Poetry and madness are inextricably fused in the work of Georg Trakl—one of the major German-language poets of the 20th century and a diagnosed schizophrenic. Sharp studies the relationship between Trakl's disturbed perception and the poetry it produced. "This book constitutes literary criticism of significant merit."—Choice. "This study recounts a fascinating story and provides translations of many poems previously unavailable in English."—Library Journal. $17.50

From The Magic Mountain

Mann's Later Masterpieces

By HENRY HATFIELD. "Henry Hatfield's reflections on Mann's later writing are welcome [and] clarify much that until now was obscure."—New York Times Book Review. "Hatfield not only gives us some of the best-balanced and most thoroughly researched interpretations of Mann's major novels, but he also presents a fascinating panorama of Mann's life."—World Literature Today. "Hatfield has a complete mastery of both the works themselves and the scholarship on them. . . . He writes with ease, grace, and wit."—Sewanee Review. $17.50
