THE FOLK CLASSIFICATION OF CERAMICS

A Study of Cognitive Prototypes

By WILLETT KEMPTON

Several questions about folk classification prompted this study: Do other cultures perceive the world differently than we do? Can perceptions also vary among subcultural groups? When we encounter an object for the first time, how do we recognize it as an instance of a familiar category? This book focuses on human-made objects—mainly Mexican ceramics—using field methods developed by the author. It expands the use of cognitive prototypes to explore meaning variations in their social context.

A New Journal

JOURNAL OF ANTHROPOLOGICAL ARCHAEOLOGY

ROBERT WHALLON, Editor

The Journal of Anthropological Archaeology will cover a broad range of topics, from the purely theoretical to explicit explanatory and interpretive models, and from the purely abstract to the specific exemplification and test of models and theory. The data treated may range from the earliest archaeological evidence for the emergence of human culture to historically documented societies and the contemporary observations of the ethnographer, ethnoarchaeologist, sociologist, or geographer.

PREHISTORIC FORAGING IN A TEMPERATE FOREST

A Linear Programming Model

By ARTHUR S. KEENE

Prehistoric Foraging in a Temperate Forest offers a unique blending of theory, method, and data. The author develops a detailed optimal foraging model for study of past behaviors. He includes a broad spectrum of hunting and gathering adaptations in a highly productive environment, namely, the deciduous forest of southern Michigan in the Late Archaic period.

MAYA SUBSISTENCE

Studies in Memory of Dennis E. Puleston

Edited by KENT V. FLANNERY

This interdisciplinary volume deals with subsistence practices in the Maya region of Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador from approximately 1500 B.C. to the present day. Topics include early agriculture in the highlands of Guatemala; the agricultural and economic systems of the Maya encountered by the sixteenth-century Spaniards; the use of animals by the Maya; the role of women in Maya economy; and the efforts of modern botanists to revive ancient farming systems.

STRATEGIES FOR SURVIVAL

Cultural Behavior in an Ecological Context

MICHAEL A. JOCHIM

This book focuses on the ecological relationships between cultural behavior and its environmental context. It is addressed to all individuals interested in human-environmental interactions, including professional anthropologists and general students of human behavior. The aim of this book is to develop a framework for examining these relationships and for comparing diverse ecological studies within a coherent conceptual structure.

CONTENTS: The Context of Ecology. The Study of Behavior. The Context of Survival. Feeding Strategies. Procurement Strategies. Settlement Strategies. Maintenance Strategies. Conclusion: Some Thoughts on Management.

1981, 240 pp., $18.50 ISBN: 0-12-385460-1(t)

PREHISTORY OF JAPAN

C. MELVIN AIKENS AND TAKAYASU HIGUCHI
A VOLUME IN THE STUDIES IN
ARCHAEOLOGY SERIES

Prehistory of Japan presents major archaeological, geological, and linguistic evidence of human activity in the Japanese islands from Paleolithic times until the emergence of the historic Yamato state in AD 700. Consideration of environmental, economic, and social factors illuminate important transformations in Japanese culture. The Japanese lifestyle is viewed as an indigenously evolving adaptive system with ancient roots in the native landscape. Impetus for growth came from within; continental elements were drawn in selectively and deliberately to serve Japanese purposes.

CONTENTS: Introduction. The Paleolithic Period. The Jomon Period. The Yayoi Period. The Kofun Period. Summary. References. Index.

1981, 376 pp., $37.50 ISBN: 0-12-045280-4

MODERN MATERIAL CULTURE

The Archaeology of Us

EDITED BY RICHARD A. GOULD AND
MICHAEL B. SCHIFFER

A VOLUME IN THE STUDIES IN
ARCHAEOLOGY SERIES

Modern Material Culture is concerned with the nature of archaeological reasoning. Its approach is one of observing contemporary human behavior as a theoretically self-conscious archaeologist might, with the aim of testing and extending generalizations derived from contemporary data to encompass both past and present human activities.

SECTION HEADINGS: Method and Theory in Modern Material-Culture Studies. Early and Late Americana. Experimental Approaches. Traditional Technologies in the Present. References. Subject Index.

1981, 368 pp., $34.00 ISBN: 0-12-293580-2

A STUDY OF PREHISTORIC SOCIAL CHANGE

The Development of Complex Societies in the Hawaiian Islands

ROSS H. CORDY

A VOLUME IN THE STUDIES IN
ARCHAEOLOGY SERIES

This volume is an archaeological study of the development of complex hierarchical societies. It critiques long-standing neoevolutionary ideas and presents a new approach, utilizing Hawaii as a case study. It is one of the first cases in archaeology in which social ranking is reconstructed in terms of housing patterns.

The volume begins with a discussion of the problems with traditional neoevolutionary hypotheses. The author proposes an alternative general hypothesis based on societal population, territorial sizes, and the number of social rank echelons. A more specific hypothesis is developed for the Hawaiian case using Polynesian ethnology and Hawaiian oral traditions. Succeeding chapters cover general archaeological methods and methods tailored to the Hawaiian context for reconstructing specific aspects of social organization, e.g., social ranking, households, local groups, communities.

CONTENTS: Hypothesis Formulation. Methods. Data Collection and Empirical Reconstruction. Discussion of Results. Summary. Epilogue. Appendices: Cross-Culture Data on Social Ranking and Labor Involved in Housing Construction. Lapakahi: Individual Dates. Anaehoomalu: Individual Dates. North Kona Study Area: The Artifacts and Their Provenience. North Kona Study Area: Hydration Dates and Their Provenience. References. Index.
