THE PRIVATE SEA: LSD AND THE SEARCH FOR GOD

WILLIAM BRADEN

Is it mere coincidence that Thoreau, Emerson, William Blake, and Timothy Leary all seem to be describing the same experience? Or have they all stumbled upon the same God—one which ante-dates
the transcendent God of the West?

Consequences of Utilitarianism

A Study in Normative Ethics and Legal Theory

D. H. HODGSON

This book presents a utilitarian argument against certain forms of utilitarianism.
The author applies this argument against 'act-utilitarian' and 'rule-utilitarian' systems of legal justification and proposes a resolution of the conflict between 'legalistic' and 'moralistic' views of the judicial decision. 35s net

Polish Logic 1920-1939

Edited by STORRS MCGALL

Translated by B. GRUCHMAN and others

The years between the two world wars saw a rich flowering of work in formal logic in Poland. Yet the writings of Polish logicians have largely remained inaccessible to English-speaking readers and all but two of these papers appear in English for the first time. 90s net

SHAFTESBURY'S PHILOSOPHY OF RELIGION AND ETHICS

STANLEY GREAN

A Study in Enthusiasm

$7.50

The mid-twentieth century is searching for more humane views of philosophy, man and nature. It is therefore strange that Shaftesbury, with his keen awareness of the polarities of human existence—reason and emotion, theory and practice, self-interest and human interest—should so long have been overlooked.

'Dr Grean presents the fullest treatment of Shaftesbury's moral and religious thought written in this century; its clarity and scholarly flavour will appeal to specialists in the history of philosophy.' Library Journal
