BONES

Ancient Men and Modern Myths

BY LEWIS R. BINFORD

Lewis Binford is probably the most influential and stimulative archaeologist in recent years, in respect to his insistence on hypothesis testing and theory building. This book is a continuation of his previous methodological work and will, without doubt, once again redirect archaeological and paleoanthropological researches in important and useful ways.

—From the Foreword by F. Clark Howell

CONTENTS: Documenting a Long-Term Archaeological Problem: Concepts and Observations. Middle-Range Research—In Search of Methodology. Previous Approaches to Understanding the Significance of Broken and Modified Bone. Human Modes of Bone Modification. Assemblage Composition: Patterns of Association Stemming From the Behavior of Man Versus that of Beast. Putting Our Knowledge to Work: Seeking to Know the Past. DEMOGRAPHIC ARCHAEOLOGY

BY FEKRI A. HASSAN

This volume surveys for the first time in book-length form, the new field of demographic archaeology. Hassan assesses the contributions made to this area by archaeologists and physical anthropologists and examines the longevity of prehistoric peoples, their death and birth rates, and the influence of demographic conditions on the evolution of prehistoric human cultures.

CONTENTS: Subsistence and Population Density of Hunter-Gatherers. Ecological Models for Estimating Probable Population Density of Hunter-Gatherers. Food Production and Population Density. The Size of Local and Regional Population Units. Population Size from Archaeological Data. Prehistoric Mortality: The Palaeodemographic Approach. Prehistoric Fertility and Population Growth. The Regulation of Prehistoric Populations. Carrying Capacity and Population Pressure. Hunter-Gatherers: Demography and Culture. The Peopling of the World. Demography and Early Food Production. Demographic Variables and Early Civilizations. Final Remarks. References. Index.

ADVANCES IN ARCHAEOLOGICAL METHOD AND THEORY

Volume 4

EDITED BY MICHAEL B. SCHIFFER

FROM THE REVIEWS OF PREVIOUS VOLUMES: "An important vehicle for reporting progress in archaeological method and theory. . . . An impressive and informative set of papers. The discussions appear to be quite up-to-date, verging on the fine edge between what is known and what is not. The target audiences of Advances are advanced undergraduates, graduate students, and professionals, the latter striving to keep abreast of a rapidly changing field. All of these groups should be well served by this fine series."—Albert C. Goodyear in ARCHAEOLOGY

THE ARCHAEOLOGY OF NEW ENGLAND

BY DEAN R. SNOW

The Archaeology of New England was written both as a regional prehistory and a summary of current issues in New England prehistoric archaeology. The chapters are organized by period in a traditional way with some important modifications. Principal among these is the placement of the historic (A.D. 1600) baseline at the beginning rather than at the end of the book. Subsequent chapters explore major periods of prehistory beginning with the Paleo-Indian period. Some periods are renamed or redefined in order to better current perceptions and the special requirements of the Northeast. Throughout the volume, the traditional narrative approach to prehistory serves as a thread of continuity that connects current topical issues. The book can, therefore, be read at the relatively superficial level of narrative prehistory or as a somewhat more sophisticated statement of loosely connected scientific issues.

CONTENTS: Introduction. Historic Baseline. Paleo-Indians: The First Arrivals. Archaic Readjustment. Late Archaic Florescence. Terminal Archaic. Early Horticulture Period. Late Prehistoric Period. References. Subject Index.

GREAT LAKES ARCHAEOLOGY

BY RONALD J. MASON

This major historical-scientific study is the first book-length examination of the Indians and archaeology of the entire Great Lakes basin. The volume provides the most thorough up-to-date coverage of on-going archaeological research of the Great Lakes, including recent pioneering Canadian contributions. The author discusses the late and post-glacial geology of the lakes and their geography, climate, and biological environments. He then details the development of the regional Indian cultures in seven chapters, covering terminal Pleistocene times through the end of the eighteenth century A.D. Archaeological sites and cultural complexes reviewed range from the Paleo-Indian Potts site in New York and Fisher site in Ontario to such discoveries as the Lasanen site in Michigan and Rock Island site II in Wisconsin, where Indians and Europeans commingled. The studies cover paleoenvironmental changes and correlations with cultural adaptations.

CONTENTS: At the End: The Beheading of Prehistory. The Inland Seas: Their Geology and Biology. The Infiltrators: The Paleo-Indians of 9500-800 B.C. Interregnum: The Late Paleo-Indian of Early Archaic Period. Transformation Achieved: The Late Archaic Period. A Quickening Pace: The Archaic-Woodland Transition of 1500-100 B.C. The Middle Woodland Period: Circa 200 B.C.-A.D. 500. Farmers Without Plows, Warriors Without Swords: The Last Act of Prehistory. After the End: Historic Indian Archaeology to the Close of the Eighteenth Century. Subject Index.

FLORIDA ARCHAEOLOGY

BY JERALD T. MILANICH AND CHARLES H. FAIRBANKS

Florida Archaeology traces the evolution of the Florida aborigines from 10,000 B.C. to the 1750s and recounts the archaeology of the Florida Seminole Indians. The authors evaluate the history of archaeological research and early ethnographic documentation in the state, the natural and cultural areas, and the early hunters and gatherers of the Paleo-Indian and Archaic periods. Then they describe the later cultures and peoples—including Deptford, Swift Creek, Weeden Island, and the peoples of east and central Florida, north central Florida, and the Lake Okeechobee Basin—and discuss Mississippian period and historic period groups and their cultural and natural environments. Many of the early Indian artifacts are described and illustrated.

CONTENTS: Archaeology in Florida. Geographical and Temporal Boundaries. Early Hunters and Foragers: Paleo-Indian and Archaic Peoples. Deptford: Life on the West Coast Marshes. Weeden Island Period Cultures and Their Predecessors. People of the Shell Mounds: Cultures of East and Central Florida. Two Regional Adaptations: North-Central Florida and Lake Okeechobee Basin. Fort Walton, Pensacola, and Safety Harbor: The Mississippian Peoples. Peoples of the Historic Period. Archaeology of the Seminole Peoples. References. Subject Index.

Digging Up Bones

Third Edition, Revised and Updated

By D.R. BROTHWELL. D.R. Brothwell's definitive Digging Up Bones describes the techniques available for the proper excavation, preparation, and analysis of human skeletal remains so that the most effective use can be made of them. With its outstanding illustrations, charts, and lists of defined anatomical terms, the book may serve both as a field manual and as a primary reference work. Published in co-operation with the British Museum (Natural History). 16 b&w photos, 70 line drawings. $12.95 soft cover

Anthropology for Archaeologists

An Introduction

By BRYONY ORME. Both archaeologists and anthropologists have seriously questioned whether either of their disciplines has anything to offer the other. Bryony Orme here illuminates the considerable contribution ethnography can make to archaeological interpretation and demonstrates how anthropological analysis of today's nonliterate societies can fill in gaps left by scanty archaeological evidence. 76 illustrations. $34.50

Life History of a Fossil

An Introduction to Taphonomy and Paleoecology

Pat Shipman

Pat Shipman sets forth the taphonomic methods of analyzing how animal remains are acted upon and altered, both by biological and by geological phenomena, in their passage from the biosphere of bones and carcass into the lithosphere of fossils. She explains the role of disease, predation, accidents, postmortem destruction, and transport in the life history of a fossil, and provides an excellent introduction to the relevant geological concepts and to faunal analysis.

ENDOWMENT FOR THE TOZZER LIBRARY BIBLIOGRAPHICAL INDEX

The catalogue of the Tozzer Library (formerly Peabody Museum Library) has long served anthropologists by providing the most comprehensive bibliography of anthropological materials available anywhere in the world. Published compilations of entries from the catalogue are available in the Catalogue of the Tozzer Library of the Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology and its four supplements published by G. K. Hall & Co., and the quarterly journal Anthropological Literature published by Redgrave Publishing Company. The Catalogue includes over a half million entries for articles, as well as books, of which approximately one-third are on archaeology. Anthropological Literature lists approximately 10,000 current articles each year, of which approximately 3,000 are on archaeology.

The unique features of the Tozzer Library catalogue, especially the inclusion of articles from serials and books in foreign languages as well as in English, and the classification of materials by detailed anthropological subject headings, which have recently been thoroughly revised to reflect contemporary anthropology, are very costly to produce. They occupy the time of one-quarter of the Tozzer Library staff. Within the last two decades Harvard University has repeatedly questioned the feasibility of continuing to support the indexing system by which articles are added to the Tozzer Library catalogue.

The Tozzer Library Catalogue, with its more than a half million entries, is the largest anthropological data base available. Each year approximately 50,000 entries are added. It would be a tremendous loss to the profession if the indexing system were discontinued, especially at this time when computerization could increase its potentialities and make it an even more valuable bibliographic tool. However, unless a firm financial foundation for the index is provided in the near future, discontinuation is a real possibility.

To provide a firm foundation for the Tozzer Library indexing system, a decision has been made to raise money for an endowment for the index. A minimum of a half million dollars is needed. Anthropologists and anthropological institutions are being asked to show their support for the Tozzer Library indexing system by making a contribution to the endowment fund. Contributions should be sent to Nancy J. Schmidt, Librarian of Tozzer Library, 21 Divinity Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138.
