EDGAR S. FURNISS, Jr. Award

The Mershon Center of The Ohio State University has announced an annual competition for the best book-length manuscript dealing with significant contributions of the policy sciences to national security and civilian military education.

The Award of $1,000 and publication by the Ohio State University Press is intended to commemorate the intellectual leadership of Edgar S. Furniss, Jr. and his unique role in establishing the Mershon Center.

Manuscripts will be judged by the Mershon Center Editorial Board on the basis of relevance to the Award subject, scholarship, and clarity of exposition.

Book-length typewritten manuscript must be double-spaced. Manuscripts are nonreturnable. Manuscripts must be received by October 1, 1976. The 1976 award, if awarded, will be made by or about December 15, 1976. Manuscripts should be sent to: Publications Office, The Mershon Center, The Ohio State University, 1712 Neil Avenue, Columbus, Ohio 43210.

Comparative and International Studies DIRECTORY

The University Council for Educational Administration, a consortium of 46 American and Canadian universities located at Ohio State University, is compiling a directory of persons interested in comparative and international studies in the politics of education. A brief one-page questionnaire, soliciting specific interest areas, will be mailed upon request, and this information will be abstracted for the directory.

The British Commonwealth Council for Educational Administration and other professional associations are cooperating in this project. The directory is envisaged as a first step in the establishment of communication among American and international scholars having educational politics as one of their principal concerns.

A copy of the questionnaire may be obtained from: Dr. Donald H. Layton, Department of Educational Administration, State University of New York at Albany, 1400 Washington Avenue, Albany, New York 12222. Dr. Layton is Editor of the Politics of Education Bulletin. The directory is scheduled for publication in early spring, 1977.

ASIAN Law Forum

The Committee on Asian Law of the Association for Asian Studies has announced publication of the Asian Law Forum.

Published annually, this newsletter's first issue contains news about programs in Asian legal studies in both academic and law firm settings. It reports on current course offerings in the U.S., Canada, Europe, and Asia. Proposals for institutional supports of Asian legal studies are debated by a variety of scholars and practitioners. It also contains outlines of current and proposed research and announcements of new publications.

Copies of the first issue may be secured for $1.25 (made out to "Asian Law Forum") from: Robert Kidder, Editor, Asian Law Forum, Department of Sociology, Temple University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19122.

Lewis Anthony Dexter ARCHIVE

The department of political science at the Johns Hopkins University has announced the establishment of the Lewis Anthony Dexter Archive of Elite Interviews at the Milton S. Eisenhower Library of the Johns Hopkins University. The purpose of the Archive is to collect and to maintain interview reports and protocols with persons holding important governmental, business, and other positions of leadership as well as with their staffs and other persons having special knowledge of public affairs, especially in the United States and Canada since 1950. An initial group of over 1200 interviews, such as those conducted for the study by Bauer, Pool, and Dexter, American Business and Public Policy, has been deposited in the Archive. In making this initial donation to Johns Hopkins, Lewis A. Dexter said: "These interviews in the long run may be useful because in many ways they are the nearest equivalent today to the political correspondences of the 18th and 19th century. Prominent figures seldom write anecdotes or explain motivations in letters; they use the telephone. Interviews record these and should be preserved."

The department hopes to secure other donations in order to preserve interviews with important decision-makers and to develop the Archive into a resource for the analysis of political and organizational activity and of the process of elite and specialized interviewing. People who have conducted such interviews and their heirs are invited to deposit interviews in the Archive. The confidentiality of such interviews will be strictly observed. Inquiries should be addressed to the Archive of Elite Interviews, Department of Political Science, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland 21218.

VIETNAM STUDIES Group

The Vietnam Studies Group, established in 1970 as an interdisciplinary and non-political affiliate of the Association for Asian Studies, invites the participation of all persons, academics including graduate students and non-academics alike, in its activities. It publishes periodically a Bulletin containing bits and pieces on Vietnam Studies.

A Directory of Vietnamese Studies in North America: Personnel, Programs and Resources" is slated for publication in summer 1976.

The major endeavors of the Group in the immediate future are in establishing regular contacts with Vietnam scholars outside North America and in seeking recognition of Vietnam Studies as a major area of research by the ACLS-SSRC.

Inquiries may be addressed to Dr. Phan Thien Chau, Chairman, Political Science Department, Rider College, Lawrenceville, New Jersey 08648.

ADMINISTRATIVE Law Review

The Administrative Law Review is a quarterly publication of the Section of Administrative Law of the American Bar Association. It is circulated nationally to 4,500 members of Congress, governmental agency employees, academics and attorneys who specialize in administrative law. The Review is seeking publishable articles on any subject of federal, state, or local administrative law. Articles accepted for publication are usually in print within three to five months. State and local administrative law articles should be regional or national in scope or the national implications of focused studies should be a significant part of the article. It is not necessary that articles be extensively footnoted law review "type" pieces. Manuscripts of 50 or fewer typewritten, double-spaced pages with notes are preferred, but longer manuscripts will be considered. Submit manuscripts to and inquire for further information from: Professor John H. Reese, Editor-in-Chief, College of Law, University of Denver, 200 West 14th Avenue, Denver, Colorado 80204.

HADLEY CANTRIL Memorial Fund Award

Alex Inkeles and David Horton Smith have received the Hadley Cantril Memorial Award, a new award for outstanding publication in the social sciences. They are co-authors of Becoming Modern, published by the Harvard University Press in 1974.

The Hadley Cantril Memorial Award is presented annually to the publication judged by a seven-member Awards Committee to represent an especially significant contribution in the social and behavioral sciences.

The Award consists of a medallion bearing a likeness of the late Hadley Cantril and a citation which reads: "Presented to Alex Inkeles and David Horton Smith for their work entitled Becoming Modern—a valued contribution to the study of development through its insistence on the human dimension of the process of modernization, its clear relevance to public policy and its rigorous empirical foundation."

The Award was established in memory of Hadley Cantril, a pioneer in social psychology, an early student of public opinion and an adviser to Presidents Roosevelt, Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson on the psychological aspects of foreign policy.

Becoming Modern was selected from many works which were nominated for the 1975 Award. The selection was made by an Awards Committee of seven individuals, each accomplished in his field and collectively representing the diversity of the interests of Hadley Cantril. Awards Committee members are W. Phillips Davison, Professor of Journalism and Sociology at Columbia University; Albert H. Hastorf, former Dean of the Faculty and currently Professor of Psychology at Stanford University; William H. Ittelson, Professor of Psychology at the University of Arizona; Philip E. Jacob, Professor of Political Science at the University of Hawaii; Kenneth E. Livingston, M.D., of the Department of Neurological Surgery of the Wellesley Hospital in Toronto; Vincent P. Rock, Staff Director of the Commission on the Operation of the Senate; and Hans Toch, Professor of Psychology in the School of Criminal Justice of the State University of New York (Albany).

The trustees of the Hadley Cantril Memorial Fund are Albert H. Cantril, Mavis Cantril Jansky, Lloyd A. Free and F. P. Kilpatrick. For more information write to the Hadley Cantril Memorial Fund, Post Office Box 9714, Washington, D.C. 20016.

POPULATION Policy Symposium Issue

The Policy Studies Journal has scheduled a special symposium issue for Winter 1977 on "Population Policy" to be edited by Michael Kraft, Vassar College, and Mark Schneider, SUNY, Stony Brook. It is particularly interested in obtaining manuscripts which analyze the formulation and implementation of population growth and distribution policies, which evaluate present and alternative policies and their political consequences, and which raise significant theoretical and methodological issues in the study of population policy and politics. A tentative topics list and guidelines for submission of manuscripts can be obtained from Michael Kraft, Department of Political Science, Vassar College, Box 387, Poughkeepsie, New York 12601. A special workshop on population policy has also been scheduled for the APSA meetings in Chicago for all those interested in the symposium issue as well as those interested in population policy in general.

INTERFUTURE

Sophomores and freshmen across the U.S. are now invited to undertake accredited independent study projects as InterFuture Scholars next year in Ghana, England, Holland, Ireland, and Jamaica. InterFuture is a non-profit educational organization headquartered at 535 Fifth Avenue, Suite 3103, New York City 10017.

Students selected to be InterFuture Scholars will begin this summer to plan cross-cultural investigations which will take them in 1977 to a European country for the spring semester and/or a developing nation for the summer. Abroad, each participant will live with local students and families and carry out a study with the help of a local expert. On return, the IF Scholar presents his or her findings to campus and community audiences in the U.S.A.

Over 70 undergraduates have been InterFuture Scholars since the program was organized in Princeton seven years ago. Each student's project is accredited by his or her home college or university as part of work toward the bachelor's degree. Study projects are carried out in a wide variety of fields, including social sciences, peace studies, history, education, environmental studies, the arts, business, and public health.

Around the central theme "Intercultural Studies for the Future," IF Scholars have examined such topics as multinational corporations, women political leaders, refugees, labor-management relations, folk art, ocean pollution, family planning, rural development, sickle cell anemia, and the black theatre.

HANDICAPPED Americans Rights Review

The official journal of the HEW Rehabilitation Services Administration, American Rehabilitation, will have a special issue of interest to the political science community this Spring. The May-June issue will be "A Bicentennial Review of the Rights of Handicapped Americans."

Articles to be included range from an overview of the demographics of the handicapped population to a case study of the accessibility of the Washington, D.C. METRO system which brought forth some major court decisions. Other papers will describe legislative groups, tactics, and outcomes vis-a-vis handicapped people; legal advocacy, including the trends which have led to such cases as O'Connor v. Donaldson; and higher education for severely handicapped people. The latter paper, prepared by the former Director of the Physically Disabled Students Program at the University of California, Berkeley, offers insight into on campus discrimination vs. handicapped people, and strategies which can work for students, teachers, and administrators to combat such abuses.

Another aim of the special issue is to inform public policy makers, teachers and researchers of the complex issues which have arisen concerning rights of handicapped people. The editor of the special is Dr. Richard P. Melia of the Office of Human Development of the HEW Rehabilitation Services Administration. Copies are available without charge by writing to Dr. Melia, American Rehabilitation, Rehabilitation Services Administration, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington, D.C. 20201.

Boston College WOMEN'S Program

The Women in Political and Governmental Careers Program of Boston College has completed its first year. The year long program is designed to encourage and educate women in the intricacies and realities of the political world, to explore the job possibilities, and to learn that politics is a women's business. FOREIGN SERVICE

Women and Minorities Program

A new U.S. State Department program seeks to recruit women and minorities over 30 years of age for skilled jobs in the Foreign Service. The program is part of an affirmative action effort to improve the representation of women and minorities in the middle level of the Foreign Service. As of June 30, women represented only eight percent of the Foreign Service Officer corps.

Applicants must be at least 30 years of age at the time they apply and at least 31 at the time of their appointment. Appointments are made on a highly competitive basis. Among the skills in demand are economists, political scientists, foreign trade specialists, managers and administrators from government and private industry, and labor-management specialists. Starting salaries range from $17,625 to $27,221. Applicants should submit a completed form SF-171 (Standard Application for Federal Employment) to the Office of Equal Opportunity, Department of State (M/EEO), Room 4427, Washington, D.C. 20520. The form is available at post offices, U.S. Employment Service offices, and Federal Government offices.
