

The Classics and English Renaissance Poetry

Three Case Studies

Gordon Braden

"Braden believes that the Renaissance poets decomposed the ancients and then harnessed the energy thereby released, rather than that they absorbed and adapted the formal structures and techniques of the classical poets. Beneath the arresting readings and the rich learning in this book, there is a genuinely revisionistic thesis, one sure to provoke debate."—A. Bartlett Giamatti $17.50

The Author in His Work

Essays on a Problem in Criticism

edited by Louis L. Martz and Aubrey Williams with an introduction by Patricia Meyer Spacks

This collection of essays presents a variety of critical voices on the relation of a literary work to its author, one of criticism's most provocative issues. Focusing primarily on the eighteenth century, with its zest for confessional literature, this study encompasses a wider overall range, from Spenser, Shakespeare, and Milton to Stendhal, Yeats, and Woolf. $22.50

Horace Walpole's Miscellany 1786-1795

edited by Lars E. Troide

The Miscellany is Horace Walpole's third and last "book of materials," or literary notebook. Lars Troide has supplied here a transcription of that text together with an introduction and extensive notes providing the historical, cultural, and literary contexts of Walpole's jottings. The text and notes together give the reader a detailed look at eighteenth-century life and thought. $15.00

Style

An Anti-Textbook

Richard A. Lanham

"A general inquiry into the nature of prose, conducted in a generous and liberating manner, a manner unburdened by any narrowness of appreciation. . . . It is Lanham's achievement that he can both respond to and elucidate the varieties of English style, from the Latinate sonority of Mr. Pickwick to the concrete desperation of Alfred Jingle's images. And this is an achievement that makes Style: An Anti-Textbook a necessary manual for those interested in the perpetuation, and the possibilities, of good English prose."

A Glossary of Faulkner's South

Calvin S. Brown

"Calvin Brown appears to have used a fine comb on Faulkner's language. For every word or phrase cited, one or more of Faulkner's novels with a Southern locale is given for reference. An Appendix deals with Faulkner's geography and topography, giving us insight into Faulkner's use of—his obsession with—the environment that he re-created with formidable accuracy of eye and ear. I found this book a surprise and pleasure, any page I turned to."—Nolan Miller, Antioch Review

The Flowering Plum and the Palace Lady

Interpretations of Chinese Poetry

Hans H. Frankel

"This book offers to the general reader of Chinese poetry in translation probably the most thorough analyses yet made available to a non-specialist audience. The selection . . . is highly imaginative and includes a good proportion of poems which have never been translated before, as well as the works of a number of lesser known but extremely interesting poets."—Asia

The Shows of London

Richard D. Altick

"Devilishly well-written, capable of infecting non-specialists with enthusiasm, and filled with reverberations that jump across centuries, Altick's chronicle (1600-1860) of London's shows—not live performances, but visual treats, freak shows, zoos, gardens, monuments, and other public exhibitions—is a rare pleasure."—Kirkus Reviews Belknap 195 illustrations $35.00

Communities of Women

An Idea in Fiction

Nina Auerbach

Nina Auerbach explores changing visions of female independence as well as complex attitudes communities of women evoke in fiction. Jane Austen, Charlotte Brontë, Henry James, and Muriel Spark are among the writers whose work is analyzed at length. From the primary community of family through female management outside the home—to a new era of feminism—Auerbach defines a literary tradition in which women are victors—not victims. $11.50

Tudor Songs and Ballads from MS Cotton Vespasian A-25

Peter J. Seng, Editor

This mid-sixteenth-century manuscript contains a collection of fifty-three early popular poems of considerable importance to scholars, forty-two of which appear in no other manuscript. Seng provides an accurate transcription, textual notes, glosses of difficult passages, and a detailed introduction, shedding light on the language and popular literature of the Tudor Age. $12.50

"Get Your Ass in the Water and Swim Like Me"

Narrative Poetry from Black Oral Tradition

Bruce Jackson

Coming from the world of the street and bar, hobo campfires and prison, these "toasts"—as the poems are called—are probably the only living form of oral narrative poetry in the United States today. "A mine of humor, wry, verbally coarse, lurid, eye-opening, a sardonic celebration of the kind of life rarely celebrated or recorded."—The New Republic Harvard Paperback, 129 $6.95

The Comic Hero

Robert M. Torrance

This lively book portrays and celebrates the hero in comedy from ancient Greek literature to modern American fiction. Torrance shows us a hero who survives by continually changing and who cherishes what others mock. The comic hero—whatever his guise—affirms a defiant vision of life that sets him apart from everyone else yet makes him one with us all. $15.00

Solitude in Society

A Sociological Study in French Literature

Robert Sayre

In this study of isolation in modern society, Robert Sayre brings a Marxist approach to literature that forcefully links literary theme to social fact. He discusses solitude from classical literature to the nineteenth century, and then presents detailed interpretations of five modern French novels—by Proust, Malraux, Bernanos, Camus, and Sarraute. Sayre interprets solitude as a modern phenomenon, directly related to the evolution of advanced capitalism. $12.50

Blake's "Four Zoas"

The Design of a Dream

Brian Wilkie and Mary Lynn Johnson

In this first full-length study of "The Four Zoas," the authors follow recurring patterns of imagery and theme and anchor their analysis, verse paragraph by verse paragraph, to Blake's text. They also discuss the development of Blake's characters as characters—not just as allegorical figures. By untangling the poem's textual and critical difficulties, the authors make this powerful and fascinating epic accessible to students and scholars of English literature. $15.00

The Secular Scripture

A Study of the Structure of Romance

Northrop Frye

Focusing on romance—a literary mode often scorned by critics—Northrop Frye demonstrates how many simple stories reveal as much about the human condition as any other literary genre.

"Northrop Frye's criticism is so richly textured, so dense with insight, and so wide-ranging in its references. . . The Secular Scripture is in fact the most sophisticated study of popular culture, considered on a world scale, that we have yet had."—The Washington Post Harvard Paperback, 127 $3.50

The Harvard logo is rendered in a bold, black, serif font. The letters are thick and blocky, with a slightly irregular, hand-drawn quality. The word "Harvard" is written in a large, all-caps font, with the 'H' and 'V' being particularly prominent. The logo is centered horizontally and partially overlaps a horizontal line that runs across the page.

Shakespeare and the Popular Tradition in the Theater

Studies in the Social Dimension of Dramatic Form and Function

by Robert Weimann

edited by Robert Schwartz

In this major work, at last available in translation, Germany's leading Shakespearean scholar examines the social and dramatic dimensions of the popular tradition in the Elizabethan theater and their bearing on our understanding of Shakespeare.

From reviews of the German edition:

"The results and new insights can hardly be overestimated in their significance; they are so well founded that it is no exaggeration to speak of a milestone in Shakespeare criticism, which will occupy the world of scholarship for a long time to come."—Michael Hamburger, Shakespeare Yearbook

"The most important German contribution to Shakespeare studies to have appeared within the last ten years at least. It combines immense learning, provocative originality, and that kind of well-reasoned partisanship which is probably essential to any stimulating literary criticism. . . . It is, I feel, most desirable that an adequate and perhaps condensed English version of this book be produced as soon as possible."—Dieter Mehl, Review of English Studies

Style in Modern British Fiction

Studies in Joyce, Lawrence, Foster, Lewis, and Green

by John Russell

Examining the style of five modern novelists whose reputations for artistry depend largely on their idiosyncratic handling of language, the author shows how the devices each writer employs can provide unexpected insights. Selected for close analysis are Joyce's Dubliners, Lawrence's Lost Girl and Kangaroo, Forster's Howard's End and A Passage to India, Lewis's Tarr and Self-Condemned, and Green's Back and Concluding.

The Economy of Literature

by Marc Shell

"A brilliant work. Speculative, even daring, yet extremely well-informed. It focuses on the relation between economic facets in the broadest sense and literary phenomena, even 'values' in general. Shell's range is very wide; he goes from Greek times to the modern period, touching down paradigmatically, and when he does so it is not by way of superficial allusion, but by serious and sustained analysis."—Geoffrey Hartman, Yale University

Expositional Modes and Temporal Ordering in Fiction

by Meir Sternberg

"This is a remarkable book: original, clear-sighted, and luminously focussed on a subject that has never been explored nearly so systematically or intensively. Sternberg is entirely successful in demonstrating his assumption that exposition, far from being a limited technical problem, is in fact a crux for understanding the nature of narrative."—Dorrit Cohn, Harvard University

Subjective Criticism

by David Bleich

"I believe Bleich's Subjective Criticism will have a remarkable impact on the profession. Based on a psychoanalytical model, or conception of the reading process, Bleich's work emerges from the combination of theory and classroom teaching. These years of teaching make his book a primary source of guidance and future research in the field of reading and writing."—Alan M. Hollingsworth, Michigan State University

The Formal Method in Literary Scholarship

A Critical Introduction to Sociological Poetics

by P. N. Medvedev and M. M. Bakhtin

translated by Albert J. Wehrle

"In view of the considerable interest in France, Germany, and elsewhere in Formalism and in Structuralism, the growth of such interest in the United States, and the many attempts made to wed these theories with Marxism, this translation not only makes available to the English-speaking world an important historical classic but also supplies a treatise on a very topical subject."—George Gibian, Cornell University

The Dissimulating Harmony

The Image of Interpretation in Nietzsche, Rilke, Artaud, and Benjamin

by Carol Jacobs

Foreword by Paul de Man

A radical reading of four writers who have greatly influenced modern critical thinking, this interpretation demonstrates their common concern with a reevaluation of language.

Beginnings

Intention and Method
by Edward W. Said

Winner of the first Lionel Trilling Memorial Award

"To understand Edward Said's Beginnings is to understand what is most importantly going on now in contemporary critical theory, both in America and Europe. An immensely useful book by one of our most brilliant critics."—Richard Poirier

"Readers who have never stopped to think about the different points at which a work might be said to begin (at the first word? at the author's idea? at the forming of a literary mode? at the beginning of a historical period?) will be surprised, stimulated, instructed, impressed."—The New Yorker

The quest for an understanding of what it means to "begin" takes Said through the masterworks of Western literature, to the cyclical philosophy of Vico (whose thought has never before been so tellingly linked to contemporary consciousness) and on to what is certainly the most brilliant explication of post-war French criticism and philosophy yet written, offering illuminating explications of Levi-Strauss's structuralism, Foucault's archaeology, and Derrida's philosophy of writing. 432 pages $5.95 paperback

Theory of Criticism

A Tradition and Its System
by Murray Krieger

"A mature and crowning achievement in the work of a major critic. . . . It will remain an illuminating work for specialists, but it will also open new doors for more freewheeling poets and critics."—Ralph Freedman, Princeton University

"Murray Krieger has become perhaps the most trenchant commentator on critical trends while at the same time developing a critical theory of his own. His Theory of Criticism: A Tradition and Its System is the most ambitious undertaking of the year in theory. Krieger is unashamedly neo-Kantian and Coleridgean and values the New Critics, who were his teachers. He holds to a distinction between poetry and other discourse, eschews the 'decentering' impulse of the French philosopher Jacques Derrida, at least where poetry is concerned, and yet finds in Derrida a useful contrary to his own stance. Krieger's book deals with a whole range of contemporary issues and ends in a clash with Derrida in which, as in Yeats's dance plays, the swords never quite touch, the duel being as much dance as battle."—Hazard Adams The New Republic

"A wide-ranging, convincing, and sometimes moving statement of the case for poetry, which may also be the case for sanity."—O. B. Hardison, Jr. The Sewanee Review 272 pages $4.95 paperback, $12.95 hardcover

THE NOVELS OF WRIGHT MORRIS: A Critical Interpretation

By G. B. Crump

Approaching Morris's work through his interest in D. H. Lawrence, Crump emphasizes Morris's concern with immanence (creative existence within the flow of time) rather than transcendence of time and examines an emerging pattern of contrasts.

viii, 260 pages. June.

Two innovative first-year texts

1 The New Composition by Logic Revised Edition

By Sidney and Carolyn Moss

The revised edition continues the original organization: the book is divided into two major parts—(1) The Organization of Themes and (2) The Development of Paragraphs and the Nature of Evidence. New examples and exercises have been added. As previous users will know, the work is self-contained, requiring no reader, and is sequential in exposition, thus rendering a syllabus unnecessary.

7½ x 10, 160 pages, cloth $8.95

2 Le français de nos jours

By Claude Francis,
Rino Cassanelli, and Gertrude Marti

A basic one-year text, this fresh, new work stresses oral proficiency, contains modern vocabulary drawn from a variety of professional fields, and thus provides a contemporary text specifically designed for career-oriented students.

Contains twenty chapters and four review units, comprehensive French-English and English-French vocabularies, and extended appendix treatments of auxiliary, regular, and irregular verbs. Each chapter has dialogues, grammar (presented inductively through exercises and examples of structural patterns), exercises, and written and oral compositions.

Workbook and teacher's manual in preparation.

Illustrated with 85 photographs 7½ x 10, 432 pages, cloth $11.85

A fresh look at the philosophical foundations underlying the work of one of our most difficult poets. This reappraisal of Crane's poetry reveals its firm basis in the skepticism inherent to romanticism and shows Crane's literary career was a series of experiments with his own subjective experience. Combs shows how Crane's use of metaphor exploits the unlimited ambiguity of the problematic reality of world and self.

Critical Acclaim for 'Trollope & Politics'

"... by far the best examination of Trollope's political novels so far written... Halperin's book is a splendid example of American scholarship. He knows more about the English 19th century scene than most Englishmen, and is very good... on Trollope's social niceties... I found myself agreeing with most of his political judgments, and all his literary ones."—C. P. SNOW, in The Times (London)

WHO IS TEDDY VILLANOVA?

A novel by THOMAS BERGER

What Thomas Berger did for the Western in Little Big Man, he now does for the hard-boiled private-eye novel, with uproarious results! Taking the classic elements of Hammett, Chandler, and Ross Macdonald—the seedy office, the down-at-the-heels shamus, the procession of sinister or merely brutal men and scheming, lovely women, plus Byzantine plots, he tells a tale too good to put down.

"Berger's style . . . is educated, complicated, graceful, silly, and brilliant." —The New York Times Book Review

The Catholic Sensibility of F. Scott Fitzgerald

By Joan M. Allen

The Gotham Library. This is the first book-length study of Fitzgerald's Catholicism, examining his literary themes and concerns from the Catholic viewpoint of the novelist. Allen uncovers new biographical material about Fitzgerald's Catholic upbringing and examines his characterizations, imagery, language and themes in light of the Augustinian City of God/City of Man metaphor, adding an important new dimension to critical interpretation of his writing.

MATTIE

The Letters of Martha Mitchell Whitman

Edited by Randall H. Waldron

Introduction by Gay Wilson Allen

It is only with the recent rediscovery of the letters in this edition—which have been lost for many years—that we are given a first-hand view of the woman who was so important in the life of Walt Whitman. Collected in this volume are 26 letters of the wife of Walt Whitman's brother, Thomas Jefferson Whitman, which she wrote to the poet and to other members of the Whitman family. The letters provide new facts about and insights into the Whitman family, and present a vivid picture of middle-class American life in the 19th century.

WALT WHITMAN: DAYBOOKS AND NOTEBOOKS

Edited by William White

The Collected Writings of Walt Whitman.

This is the latest volume in the definitive series of The Collected Writings of Walt Whitman. The three-volume collection makes available for the first time these important sources for reference on the poet's daily activities. The 16-year record of the Daybooks outlines the events of the poet's life which gave rise to his many letters and literary reminiscences. This is the first publication of the material in its entirety, exactly as Whitman left it. Included also are Whitman's Diary in Canada, Words, a hitherto unpublished dictionary compiled by Whitman for his own use, The Primer of Words, miscellaneous journals, autobiographical notes, other notebooks and fragments of interest to the Whitman scholar.

900 pages/3 volumes, $75.00 per set

WALT WHITMAN: THE CORRESPONDENCE

Volume VI: A Supplement with a Composite Index

Edited by Edwin Haviland Miller

The Collected Writings of Walt Whitman.

Here, Professor Miller updates the previous five volumes of The Correspondence with the letters that have appeared since 1969. With a list of corrections and additions to Volumes I-V and a Composite Index which will be invaluable to Whitman scholars and researchers, the Supplement completes the definitive edition of The Correspondence of the great American poet.

THEME AND FORM IN SCIENCE FICTION

edited by Thomas D. Clareson

312 p. 12.50 cl
1977 5.50 pa

Approaches to the study of science fiction from starting points as diverse as mythology, theology, philosophy, and technology, touching on such established sf themes as time travel, "lost" races, and computerized governments, discussing significant authors such as Vonnegut, Asimov, and Clarke. Recommended to instructors of sf courses as both personal reference material and as a text for the students.

"...represents a sound introduction to the genre as an area of critical inquiry, and should be a part of the basic reference shelf of serious scholars, science fiction teachers, and libraries acquiring core materials on science fiction criticism."—Choice

Social Poetry of the 30's

This stunning anthology of the work of 23 social poets of the Depression Era in the United States collects hundreds of poems that have been virtually lost since their original publication. The works of Horace Gregory, Muriel Rukeyser, Kenneth Patchen, Richard Wright, and the 19 other poets represented show that this was indeed a rich era in American letters.

Social injustice, the Depression, the Spanish Civil War, Joe Hill, the Soviet Union—these are the subjects on which the poems in this collection center. America for these poets had failed, and a new world had to be won with poetry as a force in the class struggle. They wrote in newspapers and magazines and read their work at meetings and rallies. Very little ever appeared in books or any other permanent form.

The result is an anthology that will be treasured by everyone who is fascinated by the social struggles of the thirties.

Social Poetry of the 30s is the first of a five-volume series devoted to American Literature of the Depression decade. Volumes to appear in later seasons center on theatre, short stories, essays, and journalism. April, Cloth $15.95, Paperback $5.95

An Introduction to Old Irish

R. P. M. and W. P. Lehmann

Written by two distinguished linguists, this important new book enables the reader to learn the Old Irish language while studying its literature. The basic text consists of a notable Old Irish story supplemented with poems, glosses, and annotations. The grammatical information in the annotations is summarized in separate sections dealing with specific syntactical constructions and forms. The book includes a glossary, facsimiles of Old Irish manuscripts, and discussions of word formation, pronunciation, metrics, and other subjects necessary for a full appreciation of Old Irish, its literature, and the culture that produced it. $13.50.

A New Variorum Edition of Shakespeare

AS YOU LIKE IT

Edited by
RICHARD KNOWLES

With a Survey of Criticism by
EVELYN JOSEPH MATTERN, IHM

The New Variorum Edition of As You Like It is the one book in which scholars can expect to find everything significant about this widely studied play. The volume presents the first edition of 1623 and traces it through forty-seven historically important editions completely and through thirty-six editions partially. Elaborate notes, which synthesize the works of some two thousand scholars and critics, provide literary and dramatic insights. A lengthy appendix discusses such subjects as the history of the text, the date of composition, the work's sources, its stage history, the music of the play (scores are included), the theme, the characters, and the literary style. Included is a complete version of Lodge's Rosalynde, the play's major source. Published 1 September 1977. 737 pages. Hardbound. $50.00.

CHRISTOPHER ISHERWOOD

"The best prose writer in English."—Gore Vidal

CHRISTOPHER AND HIS KIND 1929-1939

In 1929, Christopher Isherwood arrived from England to spend a week in Berlin at the urging of his close friend, W. H. Auden. He did not leave for several years. In CHRISTOPHER AND HIS KIND he records his development as an artist and an individual, among the members of his circle of intimates—Auden, Forster, Spender—and with Jean Ross, the model for the character Sally Bowles. He describes his later years in the literary circles of Maugham and Woolf; his wanderings through Europe with his German lover, who was finally taken by the Gestapo; his visit to wartime China; and his departure for America and film work toward the end of the 1930's. "Indispensable for admirers of this truly masterful writer."—New York Times $2.75

THE MEMORIAL

Originally published by Leonard and Virginia Woolf's Hogarth Press in 1932, this long out-of-print novel explores the impact of war on three generations of a tradition-bound English family. $2.25

PRATER VIOLET

A classic satire of films and filmmaking, set in pre-war Vienna. "One of the best short novels in English written in this century."—The New Republic $1.95

THE WORLD IN THE EVENING

A stunning novel of sexual conflict and self-discovery. "Isherwood is a master of English prose."—Chicago Tribune $2.50

DOWN THERE ON A VISIT

A bitingly funny portrait of four extraordinary men trying to escape their destinies. "Outrageous . . . angry, wry, revealing, infuriating, and at times marvelously comic. Few writers have so unsparingly scrutinized their worlds."—Saturday Review $2.50

ANGLO-IRISH LITERATURE

A REVIEW OF RESEARCH

edited by Richard J. Finneran

The concept of a viable tradition of Anglo-Irish literature is essentially a creation of the Revival period at the end of the nineteenth century, though the beginnings are evident some fifty years earlier. Developing out of that tradition—in different ways, of course—were some of the major writers of this century, as well as a great number of less familiar but nonetheless significant figures.

This volume provides essays on writers associated with the Anglo-Irish tradition who have been the subject of a substantial body of published research. There are also chapters on general works, the major authors before the Revival, and the Irish drama (the last of which includes brief comments on many of the minor or contemporary writers otherwise excluded).

A list of chapters and contributors follows: General Works (Richard M. Kain), Nineteenth-Century Writers (James F. Kilroy), Oscar Wilde (Ian Fletcher and John Stokes), George Moore (Helmut E. Gerber), Bernard Shaw (Stanley Weintraub), W. B. Yeats (Richard J. Finneran), J. M. Synge (Weldon Thornton), James Joyce (Thomas F. Staley), Four Revival Figures: Lady Gregory, A. E. (George W. Russell), Oliver St. John Gogarty, and James Stephens (James F. Carens), Sean O'Casey (David Krause), and the Modern Drama (Robert Hogan, Bonnie K. Scott, and Gordon Henderson).

". . . Lidz is most persuasive. What he says seems intuitively right to the layman. "Morris Dickstein has written the first comprehensive appraisal of the 60's in America. With excellent literary judgment and judicious sympathy he covers politics and culture, the rise of a new sensibility, the 'new journalism,' fiction, rock music, black writing and black nationalism, and concludes with an autobiographical sketch that nicely reveals the relationship of the observer to the things observed."

NORTHROP FRYE ON CULTURE AND LITERATURE

A Collection of Review Essays

Edited and with an Introduction by Robert D. Denham

Drawn from Frye's important work in the 1950s, these reviews deal with such figures as Spengler and Jung, as well as novelists and poets from Cervantes to Char. Denham's important introduction gives an overview of Frye's work and considers these essays as integral parts of his continuous vision.

Landmarks in literary criticism

VULNERABLE PEOPLE

A View of American Fiction Since 1945

Josephine Hendrin, The New School for Social Research. "People are coming to novels for knowledge of themselves," says the author. Her book offers telling insights into the works of Vonnegut, Bellow, Updike, Didion, and others—and into how we live our lives. $11.95

MAN AND WOMAN

A Study of Love and the Novel 1740–1940

A. O. J. Cockshut. This study of sexual relations in the English novel from Richardson and Fielding to D.H. Lawrence and E.M. Forster demonstrates why C.P. Snow has said, "I admire Mr. Cockshut as much as I admire any English academic now writing." $10.50

A GATHERED CHURCH

The Literature of the English Dissenting Interest 1700–1930

Donald Davie, Stanford University. This absorbing study of the dissenting voices in English literature, religion, and politics shatters the common stereotypes of these non-conformists as philistines, while isolating a distinctly Calvinist aesthetic in their writings. $9.95

THE MYSTERIES OF IDENTITY

A Theme in Modern Literature

Robert Langbaum, University of Virginia. Blending intellectual history and literary criticism, Langbaum examines changing attitudes toward the question of identity in modern literature—specifically in the works of Wordsworth, Arnold, Eliot, Beckett, Yeats, and Lawrence. $14.95
