
CHINA AND JAPAN: HISTORY, TRENDS AND PROSPECTS

At a time of global upheaval and re-alignment, the Sino-Japanese relationship is one of the keys to understanding the prospects for international political, economic and strategic change.

The China Quarterly Special Issue to be published in December 1990 will be a major contribution to knowledge and debate in this field. The Issue is the outcome of two years' preparation and a Conference in Tokyo in January 1990. The articles cover all major aspects in this difficult and specialized field.

The Issue will be of interest to academics, policy-makers and business analysts. It will also be an exceptionally useful source of teaching material for students taking courses in Far Eastern studies and international politics and economics. We shall be printing a limited number of extra copies that will be available by order at the normal price for a single issue.

The articles are as follows:

An Overview of the Diplomatic History and International Relations between China and Japan, 1895–1945

by IAN NISH

An Overview of the Diplomatic History and International Relations between China and Japan, 1945–90

by AKIRE IRIYE

George Hicks

George L. Hicks is an Australian economist and businessman who is a frequent writer for the Asian Wall Street Journal. This collection of recent articles, most of which have appeared in those pages, give him excellent credentials as man who can predict the future .

With 25 years of experience in the east Asia region he thinks the time had come to write about Asia in a way that reflects both his business experience as well as his academic interests.

" When China demanded the return of Hong Kong in 1997 no one felt it was in their interest to point out that HK as a free and prosperous city was doomed. Fear of China intimidated almost everyone whose conscience was not stifled by greed."

HONG KONG COUNT- DOWN

George L. Hicks

An important book published just prior to the Tianamen Square massacre gloomily predicted a bleak future for Hong Kong. Current events would appear to have borne this out .

"China has proved that it cannot be trusted, but Britain seems determined to hand over Hong Kong to the Beijing butchers as if nothing has happened. This is not and never was a normal decolonization process."

"A realistic, informed and devastating analysis of the 'one country two systems' formula."
