The

KRIOL KANTRI

series of video programs
for Aboriginal children in North Australia

The series is based on the Playschool/Sesame Street concept. There are eight weeks of programs, with five half-hour programs per week planned around weekly themes. Each program in the series contains a number of elements woven around the central theme. These elements include:

- * Aboriginal community (a community in which Kriol is used is featured in each program, thus involving twenty-five communities in three states).
- * Traditional culture (such as kinship, bush-lore, art-craft, dancing).
- * Singing (traditional as well as Kriol songs).
- * Modern culture and technology (occupations, machinery, etc).
