By F. BRITTAIN. 15s. net

Here for the first time the two parallel literatures of the Middle Ages, the Latin and the vernacular, may be studied side by side. The first part of this book is given to a critical survey of Medieval Latin and the various branches of Romance Lyric, down to the year A.D. 1300. The second contains a collection of representative Lyrics, presented in chronological order irrespective of language, and each introduced by a short commentary.
